America's service.

Dr. Keppel was dean of Columbia university when the war broke out, but he got a leave of absence, hurried to Washington and joined Baker's staff. His hours are 9 a. m. to 12 midnight.

Felix Frankfurter had war department experience as War Secretary Stimson's right hand man under Taft.

When war came he was a law lecturer at Harvard and was also handling important cases before the supreme court.

Walter Lippman's chief task with Baker is solving economic war problems. He has written several books on diplomacy and economics and was editing a magazine when Uncle Sam jumped into the ring.
