BEATING THE EXAMINERS

There are many ways of fooling the draft examining boards, and it is pleasant to realize that not all of them are being used by slackers. The men who are trying to beat the game for the sake of getting into the army are a minority, but there are enough of them to give any citizen with sporting blood in his veins a wholesome glow of satisfaction.

Many cases have come to light of registered men, rejected by the medical examiners because they were a few pounds underweight, trying to make up the necessary avoirdupois by a week or two of forced feeding. Many rejected candidates have gone to their physicians to find the best way to put on flesh. Others, turned down because of overweight, have proceeded to dieting and hard exercise to bring themselves within the limit. Numerous cases have been observed of men a trifle under height trying to make up the deficiency by stretching.

One of the most interesting stories comes from New York, and concerns a man who was rejected at a recruiting station because his heart didn't behave as the doctors thought it should. He went to another recruiting station, with the same result. Then he had a brilliant idea. He took a taxicab to a third station, arrived thoroughly rested, and was able to pass the physical examination without any tell-tale palpitation.

That man will make a good soldier, in spite of his wobbly heart. And his behavior serves as a fine contrast to that of the men alleged to have taken drugs before reporting for examination for the purpose of weakening their hearts temporarily, and thus escaping service.

ALBANY (Contributed)

Your town and my town I wonder if it's true Or, their town and his town, Whene'er there's work to do. "United we stand," our motto reads Is it only words, or do our deeds Proclaim to all that union leads In your town and my town Of Albany.

Your work and my work There's work for all to do, Your task and my task To boost our city too. Cease asking blessings on "only me," Include your neighbors, then you'll see

United strength brings prosperity To your town and my town Of Albany.

Your fight and my fight To make our city great, Your shame and my shame If failure is our fate.

The man who shirks his share to do In town, or state, or nation too, We brand a "slacker"—is that you? In your town and my town Of Albany.

VISITS

By F. P. Nutting

Part of Saturday afternoon and Sunday in Seattle gave me an opportunity to study the Northwest's biggest city, and, altogether the liveliest.

Cities, like people, become individual in the minds of those who visit them, and they soon learn to look upon them as having an individuality, almost a personality, of their own.

Seattle, Portland, Spokane, and Tacoma all have their individualities and merits characteristic of each city. Seattle people think that city is destined to become the biggest on the coast, now the third in size. At the present time it is growing fast, and yet realty values are shamefully depressed, probably due to the fact that the speculative era in real estate has passed, and it is now an era of brass tacks.

Saturday afternoon I saw the Duthie ship builders beat the Dry Dock ship builders 4 to 3 in a fast game. All the players were former professionals in the disbanded clubs in the Northwest, who have been divided up and taken in about equal numbers into four or five different ship building plants. It is said the men are making more money than when playing in the league. Lyle Bigbee played right field for the Duthie's, in the lead for the championship, and made a couple of hits.

Sunday morning I heard Dr. Mathews of the First Presbyterian church. A member of the church told me privately that he is the greatest preacher in the United States. He certainly is an able and fearless preacher, one of the three best in the Northwest. His church is a big machine, full of wheels, organized to the limit. I suggested something to a member, and he remarked:

"We will leave it to the pastor to decide that." I have always considered the membership of the church, with governing power, and with just as much right to think as the pastor. Too many churches leave everything to the pastor and the result is a country full of dead churches. The pastor and members should be partners in their work, with the pastor as the senior member.

I was passing down Pacific Avenue in Tacoma one day when I heard a woman in the second story screaming "bloody murdered" and crying for help. There was a fight on, reaching to the front window, which was mashed to pieces by the belligerents. A soft drink establishment crowd below seemed to think it was a funny affair, and no one rushed up stairs in movie style to help the woman. While afterwards they came down to the street. The man looked as if he had gone through a sausage mill, while the woman was unscathed. You can't most always sometimes tell these at the umpire, yelled: "Look at that! A street car one day tried to navigate two streets at one time. The front wheels turned and went one street, and the rear wheels another, neither leaving the two tracks. A large crowd gathered, and it was interesting to watch different men solve the problem of getting things straight again.

Saturday morning the front part of a street car caught fire from the motor, and there was such a blaze the fire department was called out, a rare conflagration. I happened to be on the scene of the odd incident.

Here's a new one to me. At the ball game in Seattle a man in the crowd, with a megaphone, getting mad at the umpire yelled: "Look at that Ford in a Buick uniform." Please don't tell Whit Crawford that I wrote this.

JACK PICKFORD COMING

Jack Pickford, talented young brother of the famous Mory Pickford, who is the star in "The Dummy," the latest Famous Players-Paramount picture will be seen at the Globe theatre Wednesday. "The Dummy" is an adaptation of the well-known play, of that name, and affords Jack Pickford a chance for the imitable touches of humor and real boy-life of which he is past master. Those who saw him as "William," hero of the photoplay adaptation of Booth Tarkington's celebrated novel "Seventeen" and as "Pip" in Dickens' "Great Expectations," will remember his work with pleasure, and in "The Dummy" he has excelled even these records.
