TO UTILIZE THE SUN'S HEAT.

Why Not Store It In Oil In Summer and Make It Work For Us?

Of course water can be heated only to the boiling temperature, but there are many liquids that can be heated to a very much higher temperature than this without boiling. I have taken a tumbler of olive oil and heated it by means of a thin iron wire connected with a voltaic battery. I placed in the tumbler of oil a test tube filled with water. In a short time the water was boiling, but the oil remained perfectly quiescent. If you store up hot oil instead of water you will have at your command a source of heat able to do all your cooking and even produce steam power to work machinery.

We have plenty of heat going to waste in Washington during the summer time, for the sun's rays are very powerful, and we do not use the roofs of our buildings except to keep off the rain. What while expenses of roof are available in all our large cities for the utilization of the sun's rays? Simple pipes laid up on the roof and containing oil or some other liquid would soon become heated by the sun's rays. The hot oil could be carried into an insulated tank and stored. You could thus not only conserve and utilize the heat that falls upon the tops of your houses, but effect some cooling of the houses themselves by the abstraction of his heat.—Alexander Graham Bell in National Geographic Magazine.

An Audacious Schoolboy.

The audacity of Warren Hastings as a Westminster schoolboy in carving his name beneath the clock on the western tower of the abbey pales before the audacity of another Westminster schoolboy, who secreted himself in the abbey in fulfillment of a wager that he would sleep in the abbey, notwithstanding the report that the ghost of Brindlaw, the president of the court at the trial of Charles I., who in the time of the commonwealth occupied the deanery, haunted the building. He spent the night in the abbey and occupied his time in carving his name on the coronation chair, which bears to this day the following rudely cut inscription: "I, Peter Abbott, slept in this chair."—Dundee Advertiser.

FALL Opening 1917

TOMORROW IS THE DAY OF OUR FALL OPENING

It is a Wonderful Pleasure to Announce this Fall Opening

Realizing the unprecedented conditions with which our country was confronted—knowing the advancing price tendency and even anticipating the declaration of war, we began long ago to contract for Fall and Winter merchandise on the most advantageous terms that were possible.

There is one thing we WOULD NOT DO under any circumstances on our own volition—we would not buy goods of lower quality than the standard by which you know us. Fortunately, the manufacturers of the better grades, such as our customers want, had the same idea. Their reputation was at stake, so they maintained the same high quality.

As the season advances, prices will advance in a measure. Right now they are as low as they will be during the existence of the war, and without any hesitation, we recommend that you BUY—BUY RIGHT NOW.

It is impossible to show our wide range of styles on this page—we ask you to come during this Opening; make your selections, AND IF POSSIBLE, MAKE YOUR PURCHASES.

QUICK ADVANCEMENT FOR RETIRED MERCHANT SAILORS

Portland, Sept. 13—A canvas has shown that there are a number of former sea-faring men residing in the rural communities of the Northwest, and to these men, providing they have the qualifications and the desire to return to the sea, the government is offering exceptional opportunities to become officers in the new merchant marine, which, according to the latest predictions, will soon be supreme in the world's commerce. The government wants men who have had two years' experience on the deck of ocean or coastwise vessels or as masters or pilots of lake, bay or sound steamers. Rather than take men now engaged in the merchant marine, whose places would

FORMER ASST. SECY. OF WAR IS MAJOR

Camp Lewis, American Lake, Sept. 13—Major Henry Breckenridge, former assistant secretary of war, is one of the battalion commanders here. He quit President Wilson's cabinet because of a disagreement with Secretary of War Garrison over the question of preparedness. "My uniform is my answer to whether I believe in this war," he said today. Idaho Pastor Here— Rev. B. C. Miller and wife of Twin Falls, Idaho, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Burkhart. Rev. Miller says that Twin Falls is now a town of more than 10,000 people and one of the most prosperous sections of the West.
