WHAT THE MAGAZINES FOR NOV. CONTAIN

The November American Magazine

The first installment of Bruce Barton's new serial, "The Making of George Groton," begins in the November American Magazine. B. C. Forbes tells how Daniel Willard, the great railroad man, got himself out of a rut; "How to Cut Down Your Coal Bill" will help you to do so. "New York," by George M. Cohan, is the first of the series "The Flavor of the Cities," and "Why I Believe in a Future Life," "When Money Began to Come Easy," and "Have You Some Imaginary Troubles?" round out a series of excellent articles.

"The Story of My Life" is about and by Elsie Janis, the famous mimic. There are some fine stories by such well known writers as Jack Lait, David Grayson, H. C. Witwer, William Dudley Pelley, and the conclusion of "Fanny Herself" is printed. The interesting People's department and the Family Money are up to their usual high standard.

November Woman's Home Companion

The November Woman's Home Companion has stories and articles this month which are up to the general standard of excellence. Alice Brown, the famous New England authoress, contributes "An Old Debt," Mary Wilkins Freeman has "Thanksgiving Crossroads," "Are You Eating Sea Food?" is an amazing article about new kinds of fish in the sea which can be eaten; Albert W. Atwood writes on "Your Money in War Time," "Voluntary Rationing" tells us what England is doing about food, and May Stanley writes of Gallipoli, the new opera star.

"Soldiers All," "Treasure and Trinket Fund," "The Tower Room," "Better Babies" and all the other departments are filled with interesting and helpful things. The fashions, picture section, cooking hints and many other helpful suggestions make this issue an excellent one.

"Not Our War," Says German Soldier
"Force of circumstances led me to know and gain the confidence of a very few of the soldiers of the line. Their fate seemed almost as pathetic as that of the Belgians. They would implore me to use my influence to get them across the border to Holland, they would ask me if I did not know some way by which they might reach America, where wife and children might in happier times join them," asserts one of Hoover's helpers, John A. Gade, of the Belgian Relief Commission, in the October Hearst's Magazine.

"They could not, as their officers telephone from the very trenches to wives in any part of Germany. I remember one poor devil who had stood for over two years in the nasty fog, under a damp railroad bridge, ordered to keep the Belgian children from sailing their shavings down the canal. I asked him one day how he liked the job. Something queer came into his face when he told me he had eight children of his own at home, to whom he had tried to give all the toys he could afford. 'No, it isn't our war,' he answered, like many others, 'it is the officers', and we are only treated like cattle!'"
