"FRECKLES" IS CLEAN AND WHOLESOME PLAY

Neil Twomey's dramatization of Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel "Freckles" with all of its familiar characters and illusive scenes, will be presented for the first time at the Albany Opera House Saturday, November 10.

The trouble, time and expense necessary in staging a dramatization of some popular novel must be understood to be appreciated. It is a hard task and there are few who possess the stamina to bring the work to a successful issue. When it became known that the wonderful popularity of Gene Stratton-Porter's novel "Freckles" was an absolute truth, and with the book gaining entire into thousands of homes, there were a number of New York producing managers who immediately sought the dramatic rights to Mrs. Porter's story of the Lumberlost.

The question arose who was to dramatize "Freckles." Neil Twomey was given the assignment, and went to work diligently. That he succeeded, even above the hopes of the producers, is attested by four first-class companies playing on tour this season.

The success of "Freckles" lies in its simplicity. There are no characters in modern fiction nor on the stage endowed with such simple nobility, sweetness and wonderful delineation, as has been given Freckles and the Swamp Angel. Mrs. Porter knows nature, she has lived all her life in the great Lumberlost region of Indiana, studying it and writing about it. She has achieved a position which can be disputed by none; her fiction and her plays are in popular demand.
