PLENTY OF MUNITIONS

Gen. Crozier has testified before a congressional investigating committee that American troops sent to France this year will be supplied with artillery and ammunition chiefly by France and Great Britain. He explained that our allies were able to do this, because they were now producing more war materials than they needed for themselves, and for the present they would rather have men and ships than anything else.

This phase of the situation struck most Americans with surprise. It has been commonly supposed that our allies still needed a great deal of help from us in the matter of munitions. And here they are, offering to help us!

It sounds incredible, but nevertheless it is true. A staff correspondent of the New York World, in a dispatch from London, gives an amazing account of the growth of British war industries. He says that the production of heavy artillery was multiplied up to November, 1916, 423 times over what it had been in 1914, and has been multiplied many more times since, and is still rapidly increasing. The number of 18-pound shells turned out during the whole first year of the war could be produced last January in 13 days, last month in eight days, and will soon be produced in four days. The quantity of projectiles for field howitzers which formerly took a year to make can now be supplied in five days. Several months ago as many projectiles for heavy guns and howitzers were being produced in 24 hours as were produced in the first year of the war.

Thus it is evident that with all the progress made in vital war industries, Great Britain has not yet attained the maximum. And France, despite the handicap of having her best coal, iron and factory districts in the hands of the Germans, has done nearly as well. When we ourselves get our stride, industrially speaking, the production of war materials will be overwhelming. And we will not need anywhere near so long as our allies did to attain our maximum, because our industries have had a long period of preparation, and are already nearing their topnotch efficiency. Present delay is due chiefly to the need of readjustments which will not take more than a few months.

Before the present year is ended, the allies will have at their disposal an interminable forest of guns and incalculable millions of shells—enough to wipe out the German trenches and sweep the German armies back in a deluge of flame and steel. And as for men, there will be no lack of them—except on the enemy's side.

RELIGION IN THE TRENCHES

It has been remarked repeatedly during this war that the trenches, with all their discomfort, monotony and ugliness, have been nurseries of religion. The revival of faith among the French people has attracted world wide attention, and has astonished France herself. The effect has been no less marked on the British army. "We went into the trenches," a British officer has said, "Christians by education but infidels in practice. And this is what the trenches have done for us—today we know there is a God."

A similar experience may safely be foretold of the American army. It is one of the comforting compensations of war in general, and especially of a war like this, fought under such terrible conditions for so lofty an ideal, that it wipes out materialism and selfishness, refines men's hearts and brings to them anew the beauty and value of spiritual things.

Wheatless and meatless days at home mean defeatless days for our boys abroad.

MISFITS

By F. P. Nutting

The other day on a streetcar I had a ride with Mr. and Mrs. Orin Judd, of Detroit, well known in Albany. They are spending the winter here.

Another streetcar meeting was with George Dodder, years ago a clerk in the Blain store. He is now working in the tailoring department of the Portland Emporium. His oldest daughter Lilly is married and resides near Tacoma, while Bertha, who is single, resides in New York, an expert seamstress.

Mrs. Zona Haight Young and I exchanged greetings on Broadway a few days ago. She resides in an apartment at 16th and Hancock streets, Irvington.

Was on Grand Ave. this week when a letter carrier whom I saw passing, took a second look at me and remarked, "How are you, Mr. N—?" He was Frank Williamson, a former Albany boy, son of John Williamson. He has been covering the same district for 12 years, a thrifty, level headed man. When he started there were 60 carriers in Portland; now over 300. He is third among the carriers in the sale of war savings stamps.

At Selwood this week I met H. T. James, who runs a pool room there. He formerly resided in Albany, for several years Dr. Hill's right hand man in the reconstruction of houses.

Bert T. Jordan, a former Albany clerk, is here studying dentistry, with only six months more before graduation. From 12 noon until midnight he is employed in a drugstore at East Morrison and Grand Avenue.

Mrs. Annie Mansfield Webber, whom I met today with her mother, wife of one of Linn county's first county clerks, told me of a prospective trip with her daughter Margaret—who is soon to be married to Mr. Cappell, of Oakland, Calif.—to one of the Hawaiian Islands. Mr. Cappell is in the army and will be stationed there during the war.

At the recent Jackson Day meeting Linn county was well represented. Those whom I noticed were Collector of Internal Revenue M. A. Miller; J. S. Smith, chief deputy under him; J. A. Beard, chief appraiser in the custom house; Geo. Finley, in the real estate business here, but a Linn county voter; and Miss Lillian Hackleman, secretary of the Jackson club, now here all or most of the time; and Hub Bryant, and Editor W. H. Hornibrook, who came here for the occasion.

The event, by the way, was one of the most patriotic ever held in Portland, an enthusiastic affair.

While here Mr. Bryant visited at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carl Thuneman, on East 47th street.

In the death here of William V. Baltimore, another old Linn county pioneer, prominent there for many years, member of a worthy family, is placed upon a list that is growing very fast.
