CORN

Queries are constantly being made at the office of the federal food administration in Portland as to why the price of cornmeal, despite the big corn crop, is so high; many persons also want to know why there is such a difference in the market price of corn, as quoted in the press, and the figure at which cornmeal is to be had from the retailer.

Assistant Federal Food Administrator W. K. Newell, who has just returned from Washington, looked into the corn situation thoroughly while in the East and reports that while the corn crop throughout the corn belt was very large, peculiar weather conditions caused a very heavy percentage of "soft" corn, which is unfit for milling.

"Only the first grade corn, entirely free from moisture and known to the trade as No. 1, can be milled," said Mr. Newell. "That is one reason why cornmeal remains at such a high figure throughout the country. The still higher price of cornmeal in the Northwest is due to distance from the producing point and the transportation difficulties. As to the apparently excessive difference between the quotations of corn in the market and the price of cornmeal, it should be remembered that the corn quotations are based on feeding corn, rather than on the milling grades.

"A new and very valuable food product, however, has been discovered through the necessity of finding a way to use the great quantities of soft corn that was produced this year. This new product is corn oil, which is proving to be one of the best cooking oils yet discovered, and which is given high rank among the different cottonseed, olive and other vegetable oils, by experts. Corn syrup is also being produced in greater quantities."

WORLD'S GREATEST EXTERMINATOR

According to one of the German forestry journals, the Kaiser, in 1908, killed 1,995 pieces of wild game, including 70 stags, elk and roebuck. At that time he had slaughtered a total of 61,730 pieces of game, more than 4,000 of which were stags, and was the leading exterminator of wild life in the world.

As a slaughterer of men, women and children since 1914, however, he has been the foremost exterminator of human life in all history.

Secretary Baker and Senator Chamberlain lunched together yesterday at the Capitol. This news was hardly received by the Republican press of the state with the same spontaneous burst of enthusiasm that was accorded to the press despatch which carried the news of the break between the Secretary of War and the Senator from Oregon.

The use of Prussian soldiers to suppress hunger and anti-war riots in Austria-Hungary will naturally make the Austro-Hungarian people feel still more kindly toward their great and good friends.

The Kansas Agricultural college is conducting a correspondence course in fuel-saving for householders. Another Kansas school has introduced a practical course for janitors and stokers. If state schools could only teach householders how to procure the coal, all would be well.
