FOR LATE WINTER AND EARLY SPRING WEAR

WE HAVE SOLVED the happy combination of bright, snappy style and real weather proof service in the several handsome shoe models in our Early Spring Shoe Stock.

Every bit of feminine beauty and daintiness that is so well expected of women's footwear has been retained in the making of these shoes; and they have the added attraction of being really weather proof.

Illustrated above is one of the more popular of these service shoes. Dark russet shade of tan calf or in pearl elk, high top, dressy narrow toe, low military heel, stout waterproof Neolin sole with rubber heels. Price $5.50 in tan $6 in pearl Many other neat styles in black tan and khaki, in prices from $3.85 to $7.50

L. M. LEWIS MAKES STATEMENT REGARDING COLLEGE

To the editor: An article appeared in your edition of yesterday quoting the First National bank of this city regarding the reported work of agents soliciting students for business courses through the extension department of some business school. The name of no school was mentioned, but evidently the article referred to myself as principal of the extension department of the Northwestern Business college, of Spokane, Washington, because, so far as I can ascertain, this is the only institution of the kind referred to, now soliciting students in Linn county for business courses in an extension department.

The article left an impression that the agents who are soliciting students are making misrepresentations, and practically stated that the proposition is a "fake."

The Northwestern Business college which I represent is an institution which was organized in 1899 and has been engaged in this work continuously since that time. This is an accredited commercial school and a member of the National Association of Accredited Commercial schools. The institution has a three-story building in Spokane which it uses exclusively for the purpose of conducting a business college and has more than 700 students enrolled annually, and through its extension course, it affords to young people who cannot leave their work to attend a business college, an opportunity for a practical business education. This school courts the fullest investigation. It has references from the Old National bank of Spokane, one of the leading financial institutions of the West, and other banks and commercial concerns of recognized standing as to its financial responsibility and it has recommendations from scores of former students as to the character of instruction furnished and the reliability of its work. These are open to inspection and I would be glad if any person would write to Spokane and seek all information possible regarding the institution.

It may be, as the article said, that there have been some "fake propositions" of this kind worked in Linn county. Regarding that matter I have no knowledge, but I consider the article very unfair and misleading because our institution was classed as one of that kind, and I feel that the impression created by the article should be corrected as it is causing us injury and damage. L.M LEWIS, Principal of Extension Department, Northwestern Business College, Spokane, Washington. —(Adv.)
