THE SIZE OF THE JOB

As the smoke of criticism dies away, we're beginning to get some idea of what the country has actually accomplished since we entered the war. Statisticians have been comparing our war preparations with the biggest previous task the United States has tackled in this generation, the building of the Panama Canal. Every American is justly proud of that feat. And yet, in comparison with what we have done in the last few months, it appears the merest trifle. Here are a few of the most striking comparisons:

We spent, for building the canal, about $300,000,000. And that expenditure was scattered over a period of ten years. In no year did the canal expenses exceed $46,000,000. The ordinance department alone spent, in the ten months from April 1, 1917, to Feb. 1, 1918, enough money to build eight Panama canals. And that is only one branch of our vast military system. We could also buy eight Panama canals for the money that the quartermaster's department has spent in ten months to clothe, feed and house our soldiers. The building of the army cantonments is said to have been a bigger job than the building of the canal. And it was done in about one-thirtieth of the time.

In creating our signal corps we had about as little to start with as we had in the case of the canal. Men had to be trained, plans formed, engines and planes invented, factories established, etc., all from the ground up. Already we have put into that branch of the service three times as much money as we put into the canal and perhaps more than three times as much effort.

The work of five army bureaus in these ten months has involved an expenditure of 20 times the construction cost of the canal.

If we compared the numbers of men occupied on the two jobs instead of the number of dollars spent, the contrast would be almost as startling.

Uncle Sam has tackled a tremendously big thing, the biggest of his career. And he has done an amazing amount of excellent work.

Hog Island, the scene of the big shippard scandal, was well named. The government is now trying to take the pork out of it.

"WAR CHESTS"

The municipal war chest idea is coming into favor. Various cities around the country are undertaking to raise, in one lump, all the money they will need to donate to various war purposes throughout the year.

The purpose is economy of time and effort. It is held to be easier to raise the required amount in one big campaign than in several small ones. Everybody jumps in and makes a tremendous effort and gets the whole thing over with and off his mind, and then goes about his private business in the satisfying knowledge that the city will be able to meet any philanthropic war demands made on it thereafter. Whenever the Red Cross or the Y. M. C. A. or the city war board or any other civic institution devoted to war purposes needs another contribution, all the city has to do is to write a check for the amount. It's a fine, modern, businesslike way of going about it.

Columbus, O., had a war chest campaign early this month. It netted $3,500,000. Of the 250,000 people in the county, more than 80,000 contributed. That shows what can be done.

Why shouldn't every city have its war chest?
