BOY FARMERS BREAK RECORDS

The boy farmers of the country bid fair to make and break records right along. They are taking their work seriously in instances too numerous to mention.

It is interesting to read that the champion corn grower of Indiana is a boy of 15 years. His first attempt in 1916 resulted in a yield of 85 bushels of corn to the acre.

The record acre corn crop of the United States goes to another boy, this time a southerner, and only 12 years old.

The wartime farming by boys has been a fine thing. They become genuinely interested before they've gone very far.
