EARLY FISHING GOOD IN CREEKS CLOSE TO ALBANY

The fishing season will probably start officially and really in Albany next Sunday from that number of inquiries being received by local fishing tackle dealers as to the best place to fish. It is probable that many parties will be out Sunday, and it is possible that good results will be had.

Soap Creek, Crabtree and Mill Creek are the best early streams in the county and the best fishing can be found there now. Those who try Soap Creek are advised, however, to secure permission of the farmers before trespassing and this advice will be good for the other streams. Mill Creek and Crabtree are not considered as exclusive as the Benton county men along the banks of Soap Creek, however.

The Santiam and the Calapooia have failed to produce good results so far. The parties who attempted to lure trout out of these streams return and report that snow has about stopped fishing there for a time and the streams are high. This is not true of the creeks nearer Albany, however. The roads are good enough for this season of the year and there is but little danger of getting stuck unless a too-adventurous trip is undertaken. The fishing is good on the west slope of the coast range but it is almost impossible to reach the streams there by automobile from Albany.

LONG JOURNEY MADE BY ALBANY SOLDIER

Big Battleships in Atlantic Are Revelation to Oregonian

The trip from Oregon to New Jersey is well described in a letter received from George H. Hughes of the Coast Artillery regiment. While most of the sights were seen from aboard ship, they apparently proved of more than usual interest to the Albany men. Following is the letter: Camp Merritt, N. J., March 18, 1918.

Dear Folks: How is everybody at home by this time? I am feeling fine. Well I suppose you are anxious to know what we have been doing. We got into Frisco Friday morning the 8th, and got right onto the boat. It was a long haul, but we got down to the boat; all we saw going down to the boat. We had to march about five miles to get to it.

We came here on the Northern Pacific. The two Miller boys were on the boat crew. We were sure glad to see them. We had a good time going to Frisco. We got lots of eats all along the way, so we sure didn't get hungry. We got 30 or 40 bushels of apples given us at Medford and Ashland.

We crossed the Siskiyou Mountains in the night so didn't get to see much of them. Our trip around through the canal wasn't quite so pleasant as it was awful hot; we were stripped to the skin of a night and didn't need any blankets. The Panama Canal was quite a sight. It took about six or seven hours to go through it. We laid over at Colon overnight, but we didn't get ashore leave.

We stopped at Newport News for a few hours. That is close to the mouth of Chesapeake Bay. It sure is some harbor. We saw more boats there than I ever dreamed of seeing. There was some bunch of battleships there, too. We saw the battleship Pennsylvania. It is one of the biggest battleships afloat. They also took us for a hike around over town. The biggest part of the population is negro; you could even smell them.

We landed at Hoboken, New Jersey, Sunday and then took the train out last night. Hoboken is about 12 miles from here, and New York is just across the river from Hoboken. I expect to go to New York tomorrow or next day. We can get 24-hour passes almost any time.

We could see the Statue of Liberty and some of the big skyscrapers of New York, from the boat as we pulled into the harbor.

I can't tell you anything about the camp yet as I haven't had a chance to look it over; but I guess there is some bunch of soldiers here. The rest of the regiment is made up of troops from Washington and California; they are National Guard, too. There are six batteries and the supply company and headquarters company, in this regiment. Well I will have to close for this time. I don't know how long we will be here, but I think for some time; but if you don't hear from me for some time don't worry about me, as we might move, and I won't have a chance to write. GEORGE.
