PRESIDENTIAL POWERS

The United States senate has at last passed the Overman bill, giving the President larger administrative powers. In its present form the measure authorizes him to "make such redistribution of functions among executive agencies as he may deem necessary, and to utilize, coordinate and consolidate any executive or administrative commissions, bureaus, agencies, offices or officers now existing by law, to transfer any duties or powers from one existing department, or to transfer the personnel thereof."

This means, roughly, that the President is to be allowed to handle all the executive departments just about as he chooses. He can cut away the red tape that has so long bound departmental work. He can get rid of "dead timber" and put in live men where they are needed. He can shift office forces around as he likes. He can reorganize the whole huge system, if he cares to.

In view of the big, nonpartisan majority given the bill in the senate, it seems sure to pass the house in a somewhat similar form. The powers conferred are great, but in the matured opinion of the senate, no greater than should be wielded, in this crisis, by the commander-in-chief of our army and navy. The public looks at the matter in the same way.

The public rejoices in this seeming evidence that the long and harmful struggle between the executive and legislative departments is coming to an end. And the congressmen who have professed such alarm at the idea of "executive encroachment" need not worry. The new powers are to expire automatically with the end of the war and congress can modify them before that if it deems wise. The dignity and authority of congress need not suffer loss. Jealous senators and representatives may find comfort, too, in the thought that if inefficiency is found hereafter in the executive department it can no longer be blamed on them.

NOTICE OF SALE OF GOVERNMENT TIMBER

Notice is hereby given that subject to the conditions and limitations of the Act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat., 218) and the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior of September 15, 1917, the timber on the following lands will be sold May 15, 1918, at 10 o'clock a. m., at public auction at the United States land office at Portland, Oregon, to the highest bidder at not less than the appraised value as shown by this notice, sale to be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. The purchase price, with an additional sum of one-fifth of one per cent thereof, being commissions allowed, must be deposited at time of sale, money to be returned if sale is not approved, otherwise patent will issue for the timber which must be removed within ten years. Bids will be received from citizens of the United States, associations of such citi-

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Eucalyptus Valuable Tree.

Eucalyptus will grow under many adverse conditions, so long as they are protected from frost. The young trees cannot stand frost, and this fact has restricted the growth of the species to certain favorable sections of California and the Southwest. On the other hand, the trees will thrive on very poor soil and they do not require very much attention. Some of the largest commercial plantations, maintained by railroad companies for tie-making purposes, are located along the shores of the Pacific ocean near San Diego, where their principal moisture comes from the heavy fogs that roll in from the sea, and which are absorbed by the leaves.
