Newest Devices of Surgery For Our Wounded Soldiers

Nitrous Oxide and Fluoroscope at Hand to Give American Wounded All Chance in World.

The best is none too good for the wounded American soldier. That is the Red Cross idea. The minute science finds an improvement in surgery it is adopted in the Red Cross army hospitals, which are models of up-to-the-minute completeness.

This fact is vividly emphasized in a recent news dispatch from Reginald Wright Kaufman, author of "The House of Bondage." Kaufman had been allowed to accompany a badly wounded friend into the operating room:

"Come on," said the interne; "your friend's in there. He's about played out; can't stand chloroform or ether. Get to give him nitrous oxide."

"I knew that for a patient whose resistance has been diminished the difference between the old anesthetics and this new one is frequently the difference between life and death, but I also knew that nitrous oxide is not on our army list and that no supplies existed a year ago in France."

"The Red Cross has put up a plant here," explained the interne. He opened a door. Bill lay on the operating table, and the surgeons were at work. "They're after that abdominal wound," the interne told me. "They're working with the fluoroscope."

"Above Bill's upturned feet and about a yard away stood an X ray apparatus. Its flesh piercing light fell on a disk of metal that an orderly held over Bill's bared waist. The violet rays passed through the disk and into the patient's abdominal cavity. The surgeon's eyes followed them through the metal and into the flesh. His knife plying fingers worked under the disk and deep in the wounded man's belly. He cut with that solid plate for a window.

"He can see what he's after before he gets started," my guide exclaimed, "and if he overlooks any shell fragments there is a magnetic contrivance that sounds a buzzer when he gets near them."

"It would be all right, they told me. Thanks to the fluoroscope and the nitrous oxide, a stay here under treatment and then a rest at one of the Red Cross convalescents' camps by the seaside would fit Bill for a return to the trenches."

Evangelical Church Resolutions Strong

At the last session of the Oregon conference of the Evangelical church resolutions were adopted of a patriotic nature, and the support of the church to the government was pledged. Following are the resolutions:

Resolution on Patriotism Adopted by Oregon Conference, Evangelical Association, 35th Session

We, the Oregon Conference of the Evangelical Association, a body which from the beginning of its existence as a denomination has been distinctly American in its origin and is American in its genius and polity, and whose founder, Rev. Jacob Albright, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, hereby express and declare our whole hearted devotion to our government and country in this great hour of stress and trial. We are in hearty accord with the sentiments expressed officially by President Woodrow Wilson as to the reasons for our entering into the present world war, and the objectives and ideals for which we contend. Especially are we pleased because our government has declared itself free from any design of territorial or other aggrandizement, but as contending for the highest interests of humanity, and to make the world safe for democracy by the overthrow of all tyrannous and militaristic governments.

We further pledge our loyal support to the government of the United States in its determination to prosecute the war to success and victory, and earnestly pray for our President and his advisors that they may be divinely sustained under their heavy burden of care and responsibility. We further pray that our country may be purified and strengthened in all righteousness by the experiences and sacrifices incident to the great war.

We pray God's blessing upon our army and navy and upon our brave and noble boys who have gone into training camps and trenches to enforce the will of the nation. May they be kept pure and upright, worthy representatives of this enlightened nation, and come back victorious to take up again the vocations of peace and progress.

THE Telephone Vanguard

The soldier off to camp finds that the telephone man has preceded him. It has been the telephone man's job to help make the camp ready for the soldiers. He has gone ahead with the contractors, installing temporary telephone equipment to facilitate the work of construction. As fast as buildings have been erected, permanent central office equipment has been installed, poles have been set and wires strung and the camps and cantonments connected by additional trunk lines to the central offices in nearby towns and cities. Notwithstanding the scarcity of material, the large amount of equipment required for these camps has been manufactured and delivered in less than half the time ordinarily required. As a result of this telephone activity, all the varied telephone needs of these great military establishments are amply taken care of and each camp headquarters is in direct telephone communication with the war department at Washington, and with important military points throughout the country.
