Mae Marsh Is Star of "The Beloved Traitor"

"The Beloved Traitor," the new Goldwyn picture starring Mae Marsh, which will be seen at the Rolfe Theatre beginning Friday, is a delightful screen version of Frank L. Packard's novel of the same name.

Mary Garland, a Maine fishermaid, has a sweetheart, Judd Minot, a fisherman whose talent as a sculptor is unsuspected by the townspeople. He is haunted by a vision wherein he sees a statue of a woman with a face strikingly like Mary's and the people around it acclaiming him as its creator. The figure stands with arms outstretched as if welcoming the returning fishermen. He discovers Mary in that attitude when she goes to the rescue of her uncle, Simeon, caught in a storm far out beyond the rocks while returning from the lighthouse. Judd saves both. Shortly afterward, the uncle, with whom Mary lived, dies. Before his passing he has exacted Judd's promise to watch over Mary, along with Father Anthony, the village priest.

TANGENT HAPPENINGS

TANGENT, May 30.—(Special)—M. F. Wood and family of Corvallis passed through Tangle Saturday on their way to their farm, where they planted beans, potatoes and squash for their use the coming winter.

W. A. and John Scott of Independence visited relatives near here Sunday.

Mrs. E. B. Thompson of Lebanon visited her brother, J. H. Scott and family, a few days ago.

A. F. Kriger, who has been living on the Wood farm, has bought a small place two miles north of Albany and moved there to make her future home.

J. F. Scott of the of the Corvallis postoffice, visited with his parents near here Sunday.

Reports come from Corvallis that Rev. A. P. Moses, formerly a resident of Tangle, is seriously sick. He is 85 or more years old.

B. F. Scott, lately of Elma, Wash., but now of Jefferson, visited his brother near here lately.

J. M. Sharp of Spokane visited his mother for a few days, and has now returned to his place of business.

Farmers throughout the country have completed their spring seeding and planting of their gardens and are planting their corn for silage and are now ready to commence the cutting of their early clover. Fall grain looks well and is beginning to head out, and if nothing happens there will be good crops this season. A heavy storm consisting of lightning, thunder, rain and hail, struck this part of the county Sunday eve. The hail was good-sized and beat down tender plants and packed the ground quite badly. der was unusually loud for Oregon.

From present appearances there will be a fair crop of all kinds of fruit this year. The trees as a rule are full of blossoms and the weather was favorable for their fertilization.

The vetch fields are alive with green aphids and in some localities they have done much damage, and if the weather still keeps cool they may entirely ruin the whole crop of vetch. It is claimed that a few hot days will kill them, so we hope for warm weather soon.

The roads are now fairly good and autos are continually on the go; horse transportation is almost eliminated from the roads entirely, but I hear no complaint from the horses.

Smith Serves the Red Cross

By T. J. EDMONDS,

Director of Civilian Relief of the Potomac Division.

"Well," said Smith as he walked into my office, "I've wound up all my business interests."

"What for?" I said as I rose to greet the man I had known in my home city years before.

"So I could offer myself if I'm worth having. I've got to get into the game. Anything useful and human. I'm ready for marching orders."

"Worth having?" I echoed. "You've dropped like a God-send. We've got the biggest man-sized job you ever tackled. You're going straight with the Home Service. Something useful and human? Why, in a week this thing will be gripping you so that you'll eat and sleep it!"

II. The Home Service Section of a big Red Cross chapter was in session. As Smith and I arrived they were discussing the problem of a soldier's wife and six children found living in two tenement rooms in a building that had been condemned because of a leaky roof, mouldy floor and lack of fire protection. They had sold most of their furniture piece by piece for current living expenses. The children had no change of clothing. There was no income and, because of the mother's condition, no possibility of one, except the expected allotment and allowance, which even when it came would not entirely meet the cost of living in the city. The Home Service worker had given a generous sum of money to meet the urgent needs, and now the committee was planning to rent better quarters, move the family, secure medical and nursing attention for the woman, outfit them all with clothing and furniture and keep regularly in touch with the family.

III. In Smith's next case the Home Service Section and the tuberculosis society had arranged hospital care for a man discharged because of tuberculosis contracted "in the line of duty." Some attorney had told him he would get compensation for him on a fifty-fifty basis, but the lawyer-member of the Home Service Section helped him fill out the proper form which the Red Cross office supplied and assured him that no discharged soldier or soldier's beneficiary should ever pay for collecting either compensation or insurance.

IV.

A member of the women's uniformed corps drove us in her machine out to a camp where there are 30,000 men.

Here we met the Red Cross Home Service man. We didn't take his time—we just watched him. One moment he was helping a man to fill out duplicate allotment blanks; the next he was arguing the merits of insuring to the limit; the next he was wiring a Home Service Section to visit a man's family; next he was going with a boy who had received a tragic telegram from home to see the commanding officer about a leave of absence; then he was speeding on his way a poor fellow discharged because of permanent injury; then we saw him talking to a soldier and a girl wife at the hostess' house; and as the shadows fell he was cloistered with a worried chap, who was telling him about an impending mortgage foreclosure and an expected baby.

V. Later the same evening we saw him stand up in the Liberty theater and, his eyes glowing with the service picture in his own mind and his voice ringing with the conviction of his own enthusiasm, tell a thousand young fellows what Home Service is. He painted homes made happier by Home Service—told of friends for fighters' families found by the Red Cross—pictured devoted Home Service workers fighting the country's battles this side the trenches. When he ended some fellow struck up "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

We were silent for a long while on the way home. Smith and I. Finally Smith broke out:

"Can I do it? The sort of thing—camp service, you call it? Why, that's where I want to be—at the point of first contact with those living problems. Perhaps was right when he said, 'The thing most needful to the American fighting forces overseas is anything and everything that will contribute to the morale of the men in service.'"

"Home Service—I see it now—means morale. When can I go to work?"

A MESSAGE FROM EDWARD N. HURLEY,

Chairman of the United States Shipping Board.

EVERY dollar that has been appropriated by the American Red Cross in this war has welded closer that relationship between the United States and the nations of the Entente, a relationship that will have a marked effect upon the peace council that is coming.

If this work of spreading the gospel of mercy is to continue, every man, woman and child in this republic must give the American Red Cross his fullest support in its second campaign for $100,000,000.

Our boys in Europe are looking to us to back them up and I know of no better means of supporting them than through the instrumentality of the American Red Cross.

The good it has already accomplished and the comforts and welfare it will provide later when the stress of war becomes greater for the United States forces, make it imperative that the second fund of $100,000,000 be a spontaneous gift on the part of the American people.

Back of the Firing Line

Modern war conditions demand that our armies must have behind them national solidarity, the coordination of all the vast activities and an industrial army many times greater than the Nation's fighting forces. The Nation's capital is linked with all these varied activities by the toll and long distance lines of the Bell System. Thousands of miles of special wire systems have been turned over to the Government for its exclusive use. Switchboards in the Government departments at Washington have been enlarged and new ones installed. Right of way is given to Government business over all commercial lines, so that the Government chiefs may keep in constant touch with every phase of the Nation's great task and direct its progress intelligently and effectively.

In organizing the military activities of the country, the Government has had the effective cooperation of the Bell Telephone System, which even in peace times reached 70,000 communities and now extends to the headquarters of every Army Department and Naval District in the United States.
