KNOX BUTTE PERSONALS

KNOX BUTTE, June 5.—(Special)—Ruth Lines returned to Portland after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lines.

Mrs. J. W. Propst visited over the week-end at Kingston with her brother, Charles Cole.

G. W. Rohrbough of Albany preached Sunday afternoon at Knox Butte schoolhouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Caldwell and children of near Brownsville visited Sunday at the A. J. Caldwell home.

The Knox Butte school closed a splendid year's work last Friday. Etta Powell was the teacher and the district was highly pleased with her as an instructor. The pupils all made their respective grades, Louis Sales completing the eighth grade. A picnic on the Butte was enjoyed by the school and patrons, a picnic dinner and ice cream making the day complete.

The Knox Butte Red Cross auxiliary gave an entertainment and ice cream social on Monday evening. The proceeds amounted to $39.65.

CLOWNS LAUGH AND GROW

FAT—AND THIN—WITH CRUCIS

"Laugh and grow fat; laugh and grow thin." That's the way it works with the clowns in the Sells-Floto circus, coming to Albany soon; for there are fat ones, thin ones, small ones, tall ones, rotund ones, angular ones, pompous ones and meek ones, but they are all laughing clowns and they are selected to make Johnny and his papa and mamma and his brother and pretty sister laugh. If they don't make you laugh, they'll make you smile. At least, anyone of them will lay a bet with you on that. In the two-mile parade, the clown band rides on little Rocky Mountain burros—the famed "canaries" of the Great Divide. After the many-hued, kaleidoscopic opening spectacle, "The Birth of the Rainbow," the clowns flood the hippodrome track as the big feature acts fill the rings and stages. There are no dull moments afterward.

NOTICE
The federal food administration for Oregon and Linn county calls upon every householder to surrender at once to the local retail stores whatever wheat flour they might have in their possession. Flour will be received in any quantity, even if the sacks are broken and partly used.

The state of Oregon is going on a wheatless basis, beginning with June 1, and every citizen is called upon to assist our government to the utmost of his ability during this great struggle for world-wide democracy.

ALFRED C. SCHMITT,
113 County Food Administrator.

CONSERVE WHEAT

parts of the wheat grain, formerly used as feed for animals. This coarse flour is then mixed with a large percentage of flour made from other cereals. In France and Italy the bread is rationed according to the age and occupation of each person. France has always lived on bread. Of the average Frenchman's normal diet 52 per cent is composed of bread and but 48 per cent of other foods. France has just put her whole people on a bread ration basis which limits them to only two-thirds of the amount they have been accustomed to.

The people of Belgium are living on a relief ration. Over one million of them get their daily bread and soup by standing in line long hours before the relief kitchens. They do not complain. They only ask that the soup and bread be there every day. They depend upon America for the supply.

The people of England, France, Italy and Belgium are not accustomed to the use of corn and cereals. They do not know how to use them and are unable to cook them properly. They must have wheat to mix with their potatoes and with such other foodstuffs as they have. At the present time we are sending them wheat to the limit of our cargo space, and yet we are only meeting the minimum requirements of these people.

In order to continue our wheat shipments our people must share their present wheat supply. Even with one-half of our wheat, the loaf of the allies is small. It cannot be made smaller without undermining their strength and morale to such a degree that it will mean disaster. There is just one thing for us to do, and that is to save wheat and to send wheat.

In this connection the question naturally arises: To what extent can the wheat to which we are now accustomed in our diet be reduced without injury to the health of the individuals of the nation? This question was put by the food administration to a committee of experts recently assembled in Washington to consider a special physiological problem involved in the general problem of wheat conservation. This committee was composed of the highest physiological authorities in this country. Their answer to the question was direct and unequivocal: "It is the scientific opinion of the committee that in a mixed diet wheat may be entirely replaced, without harm, by other available cereals, namely, rice, barley, oats, and corn. However, we should not recommend this except as an emergency measure."

We are accustomed, as a nation, just as most of the nations of Europe are, to the use of wheat bread, and a sudden break in our custom would have for some people a psychological significance more or less disturbing. However, if these people could well understand the emergency leading to the change, and then could recognize that they are aiding their country in the great emergency by making the change, this psychological disturbance would be much reduced.

Exactly this condition of a great national emergency, to meet which the loyal and patriotic efforts of all the people are needed, is the condition today. Large masses of people in Europe are actually starving to death. It is only because of the great national emergency that the food administration makes use of this deliberate judgment of the physiological experts called in for advice.

Even under these circumstances it is recognized that because of economic and commercial reasons, not all of the people of America can go without bread based on wheat, but it is certain that a great many people in this country can easily do so. It is the belief of the food administration that, for the sake of maintaining the wheat-bread supply for the armies and civilians of our fighting associates in the war, as well as our own soldiers in France, every patriotic American who can possibly do so will be glad to dispense entirely with wheat from now until the next harvest.

Advertising Momentum

Many institutions expect advertising to perform miracles, to rehabilitate a depleted list of customers in a few weeks or harvest a golden crop of dollars. Advertising is not based on wizardry any more than on quackery. Its results are cumulative.

There are no miracles in advertising, but money so invested, if invested properly and the opportunities thus created properly followed, will yield handsome returns.

An inquiry from a prospect who has never transacted business with your organization is the most vital and the most potent factor in the success of your business. That inquiry represents growth, development new business, —and new inquiries are worth attention, study and care—the full measure of your service. The aggressive and consistent advertiser whose educational publicity attracts, will find that the business has acquired a new momentum, the effect of which will be apparent in succeeding years.
