FEEDING COWS FOR BEST RESULTS IS EXPLAINED

By S. V. SMITH County Agricultural Agent.

County Agricultural Agent.

Pasture grass is the ideal feed for dairy cows. When abundant it provides all the essentials necessary for the production of milk except possibly in the case of those cows which have in the case of those cows which have the ability to produce milk in exceptionally large amounts. It is untritious, palatable, succulent and pro-vides a balanced ration. If pastures vides a balanced ration. If pastures were abundant throughout the year the year the average production of the caws of the country would show a great increase. Unfortunately, however, in most communities pastures supply feed in abundance only during a comparatively short period. As the season advances and the dry season season advances and the dry season approaches the pastures become dry and the food scanty. The inevitable result is that the cow declines in both flesh and milk production. The loss is serious for not only are the total cash returns much less but the net returns are reduced to a much greater extent. Much loss of flesh is accompanied by a depression in general health that will affect the cow during her entire lacation period.

The cow that is well-fed through her entire lacation period is the one that will show the greatest yield and net profits. Skimping the ration instead of being a saving proposition is an expensive one. Dairymen are more and more coming to realize the importance of liberal feeding and providing a supply of green food for summer use, either green crops grown for the purpose or through ummer silage.

A succession of crops can be worked out for almost any community. Rye, oats, Canada peas, clover, vetch, millet, corn and roots are some of the crops used. The summer silo, however, is the most satisfactory source of feed for supplementing pasture. The crop is harvested at least expense and is stored close to stable or yard where needed. Rye oats, oats and vetch, clover are some of the crops used for this purpose. Corn silage carried over from the previous season is used by nany dairymen. The summer silo has dairy products cheaply.

This important subject will be co sidered among others at the big dairy men's meeting to be held in Albany on Saturday, June 8 at 10 o'clock at the Commercial club rooms, and als

Tunnel Would Pay for Itself.

It has been proposed to construct railway tunnel under the Firth of Forth, Scotland, paralleling the famous bridge now spanning that body water, and to pay for the tunnel by making it largely a coel mining propostrion. Mining engineers point that coal is now being mined on both sides of the firth from the same scams and that much of this excavating is done under water. At this point the estuary is only about two miles wide and it is contended that a continuou passage could be made beneath it by properly co-ordinating the mining operntlens. In this way what would otherwise probably prove to be to estly an improvement could be mad in profit.—Popular Mechanics.

The Blain Clothing Comp'y

Back of the Firing

Modern war conditions demand that our armies must have behind them national solidarity, the coordination of all the vast activities and an industrial army many times greater than the Nation's fighting forces.

The Nation's capital is linked with all these varied activities by the toll and long distance lines of the Bell System. Thousands of miles of special wire systems have been turned over to the Government for its exclusive use. Switchboards in the Government departments at Washington have been enlarged and new ones installed. Right of way is given to Government business over all commercial lines, so that the Government chiefs may keep in constant touch with every phase of the Nation's great task and direct its progress intelligently and effectively.

In organizing the military activities of the country, the Government has had the effective cooperation of the Bell Telephone System, which even in peace times reached 70,000 communities and now extends to the headquarters of every Army Department and Naval District in the United States.
