WHY NOT SMILE WITH "DOUG" FAIRBANKS

What little child would not like to be entertained by Douglas Fairbanks in person like a fortunate group of happy orphans at a seaside home last summer? And what little child, no matter how much given to sulking, could not learn to smile under his masterly tutelage? The only answer to both questions is—"no little child."

Probably it is the magnetism of his unrivaled smile that draws them to him and the warmth of it that makes the kiddies happy in his presence on the screen. As a maker of sunshine for old and young, Fairbanks has his own claim on the hearts of a multitude.

In "Reggie Mixes In" he outdoes all previous startling performances, with a fight in which he wrestles, falls, crawls, staggers and plunges through 15 minutes of physical combat with W. E. Lowery, an actor of powerful physique, who gives the athletic young star a tussle of very evident reality. Fairbanks comes out of the battle with a goodly portion of his clothes missing and with his well-known good looks entirely missing, but a joyous victor nevertheless.

Douglas Fairbanks will be at the Globe Theater on Sunday and Monday!

"PARENTAGE" APPEALS TO THE CHILDREN

It is a different sort of production. It is a message to the public, and was enjoyed by every one who saw it last night, because it struck the human note so sincerely. There is not a man, woman or child who sees it in Albany who will not be impressed with the beautiful story which Hobart Henley has so intelligently placed upon the screen. The atmosphere is real; the photography is excellent, and the cast an exceptional one. In fact, every member of the company seems to be peculiarly and particularly fitted to play the role entrusted to him or her. There is no wild nor impossible melodrama in "Parentage."

"The theme contains human thoughts that have been touched upon by producers in the past, but the story is a strong, gripping one that will set every mind to thinking hard after they have seen it. It is the sort of a picture that will draw new enthusiasts to the films."

"Parentage" will be shown at The Rolfe for the last time tonight.

TALE OF PLAINS AND RANCHERS

"The Trail to Yesterday," the red-blooded tale of the Western plains and ranches which comes to the Rolfe Theater Sunday, presents the virile young star, Bert Lytell, in his initial Metro All-Star Series picture. Of escape unjust punishment for a crime of which he is guiltless, Ned Keegles (played by Bert Lytell) goes West. As he goes on, he becomes known as "Dakota," the terror of the plains. A storm brings Dakota and a girl together in a lonely cabin. When he learns that she is the daughter of the man who killed his father, Dakota forces a preacher, who also sought shelter, to marry the girl to him. Revenge has taken possession of the heart of the outlaw, but fate steps in, and compels him to aid the girl for whom he determined to make life miserable. A spark of love is kindled which results in happiness for the outlaw and the girl.
