REALLY FINE SHOES—

that is the kind of footwear that you have been accustomed to buy when you've asked for "McDowell's Custom Grade," are harder to get every day, war work must have the preference, that means that the expert shoemakers are fast becoming expert in other lines. And the shoe factory production is practically turned over to Uncle Sam. In view of these conditions we cannot urge our customers too strongly to supply themselves with their size in the particular style each is accustomed to wear, and the price advantages which we obtained by buying long ago we gladly extend to you.

FOREST SERVICE ADOPTS STANDARD FIRE FINDER

The Osborne firefinder has been adopted by the forest service as standard equipment for lookout stations on the national forests of the country, according to a letter just received by District Forester Geo. H. Cecil from the forester at Washington. This firefinder, the invention of Forest Examiner Wm. B. Osborne Jr., of Portland, has been tried out successfully on the summit of Mt. Hood and at numerous other lookout stations in various parts of the North Pacific District for several seasons. Fires more than 50 miles distant have been accurately located from Mt. Hood by means of this instrument.

More than 350 of these firefinders are now in use and it is planned eventually to equip all the more important lookout points on the national forests which have suitable housing facilities, with them. The instrument complete costs about $48.

In addition to its use by the federal forest service, the firefinder is used by the Canadian forest service and a number of associations of private timberland owners in their fire protective work in various parts of the West.

Foresters in all parts of the world have shown their interest in the instrument by writing to the district forester for information about it. One request for information was received recently from the conservator of forests of Australia.

Back of the Firing Line

Modern war conditions demand that our armies must have behind them national solidarity, the coordination of all the vast activities and an industrial army many times greater than the Nation's fighting forces.

The Nation's capital is linked with all these varied activities by the toll and long distance lines of the Bell System. Thousands of miles of special wire systems have been turned over to the Government for its exclusive use. Switchboards in the Government departments at Washington have been enlarged and new ones installed. Right of way is given to Government business over all commercial lines, so that the Government chiefs may keep in constant touch with every phase of the Nation's great task and direct its progress intelligently and effectively.

In organizing the military activities of the country, the Government has had the effective cooperation of the Bell Telephone System, which even in peace times reached 70,000 communities and now extends to the headquarters of every Army Department and Naval District in the United States.
