WOUNDS

In considering the casualty lists, as they come in, it is just as well to remember a story of a French battalion told in a recent war dispatch. While the battalion was drawn up for the distribution of medals, a visitor happened to ask how many had been wounded. The commander did not know, but proceeded at once to find out.

He started by asking all the men who had been wounded five times to step forward. Forty-six left the ranks. He then called for those with fewer wounds, in a descending scale. There were 75 who had been wounded four times, 194 who had been wounded three times, 101 wounded twice and 182 wounded once. That left two men out of the 600 who were, free from wounds. They hung their heads in shame, and actually wept as their comrades laughed at them, until their commander restored their self-respect by going up to them, opening their coats and showing the war cross ribbons on the breasts won for distinguished gallantry. "It is not their fault," he explained.

The story might end right here. It is complete in itself, an appealing little picture of the war as fought so devotedly for four years by the brave men of France. But it has its lesson for our own army and people at this time, particularly, when we are beginning to feel the human cost of our victories.

Let us consider the fact that out of 600 French fighters, taken at random, 598 had been wounded anywhere from one to five times, and that every man of them was there on the job just the same, sound enough to lick more than his weight in Prussians.

Don't worry, then, when you hear that a son or brother or friend is wounded. Wounds mean little in this war, particularly on the allied side, where injuries are so promptly and wonderfully cared for that about nine times out of ten they leave the victim practically as able-bodied as he was before.

First Foch gets the Huns in a pocket, and then he picks the pocket.

THE U-BOAT BALANCE

A year ago there was a net loss in allied shipping of 550,000 tons a month. That means that the Germans were sinking 50 to 60 more merchantmen a month than the allies could build.

In the last quarter there has been a net gain of 100,000 tons. That is to say, the allies have built about 20 ships more a month than the Germans could sink.

There you have the U-boat situation in a nutshell. We have turned the corner. We turned it some months ago. We are not only holding our own but making up our losses. On July 1 enough had been made up to give us as much shipping as we had on last Jan. 1. The rate of gain is increasing right along. Before the year is out we shall have more than caught up for the big losses of 1917. Then we shall go right on piling up an overwhelming surplus of tonnage.

What we regarded a year ago as the greatest menace to our winning the war has already been met. We still have to fight the U-boats, but we do not have to worry about them any more. We can concentrate on the purely military problem; and we are not worrying about that, either.

Back of the Firing Line Modern war conditions demand that our armies must have behind them national solidarity, the coordination of all the vast activities and an industrial army many times greater than the Nation's fighting forces. The Nation's capital is linked with all these varied activities by the toll and long distance lines of the Bell System. Thousands of miles of special wire systems have been turned over to the Government for its exclusive use.

UNIVERSITY PLANNED FOR MOUNT OF OLIVES LONDON, Aug. 9.—The Mount of Olives, near Jerusalem, is to be the site of a university. The institution is to be founded by the Zionist societies of the world. While primarily for Jews, it will be open to students from all nations. Zionist authorities have announced. Present plans include a school of liberal arts and sciences and a school of medicine. Other branches will be added as the university grows. The institution will be opened as soon as conditions in the Holy Land permit. An attempt will be made to use the ancient Hebrew as the classroom language.

MADGE KENNEDY TRIUMPHS IN STRONG DRAMATIC ROLE Brilliant Madge Kennedy, whose popularity is spreading to every town where motion pictures are shown, comes to the Globe Sunday and Monday in "The Service Star," by Charles A. Logue. From every standpoint this Goldwyn film play is a distinct advance over any of her previous successes, not even excepting "The Danger Game," conceded to be Madge Kennedy's most notable achievement. "The Service Star" is a play of the moment, symbolizing by its title the flag of all mothers. While it is in no sense a war play the new production combines the hopes and fears and prayers of every woman who has sent a man overseas. It tells the story of a hero's waiting wife and the strange deception practiced on a draft board and what discovery meant to everyone concerned. Replete with strong situations and a wonderful love story, "The Service Star" would be a capital play even if it were not of extreme timeliness. The fact that it embodies a plot of extreme originality and strikes a powerful note of patriotic duty adds to the success which is bound to come once Madge Kennedy's admirers see her in this dramatic production.

DIDN'T WANT IT IN THE PAPER The Express reporter when collecting items, met little Dorothy Wallace of Beaver Creek and said, "Dorothy, what do you know?" She replied, "I don't know anything and don't you put it in the paper"; but, finding it among our items, we hope Dorothy will forgive us for sending it in, as it is a hint for everyone to know something when the reporter comes around.—Express.
