J. STUART BLACKTON SAYS "NEW PICTURE, 'MISSING,' IS BEST OF HIS CAREER". J. Stuart Blackton, "master of screencraft," producer of "Missing," which will be displayed at the Globe Theater this week, declares that this is probably the most important production of his career. This statement emanating from so experienced a film man as Commodore Blackton is in itself a splendid recommendation for the picture, which certainly carries with it a message that is both patriotic and poignant, visualizing the great problem that confronts the women of the allied nations and those of our own country. "War means sacrifice," said Blackton recently, "but it is not always a sacrifice that ends in despair for, on the contrary, out of the great maelstrom of war is often bred the greatest moment in a man or a woman's life. And also, from the ranks of the 'missing' frequently there return to their loved ones many who have been mourned as lost.

That Charlie Chaplin's vogue is a thing of perennial increase can be gathered from the recent announcement of a well known clipping bureau that he ranks third to President Wilson and the Kaiser as the most mentioned personality in the world. The reason can be found by a visit to the Rolfe Theater, where "A Dog's Life," first of his million dollar comedies, will be shown for the last time tonight.
