Coming to The Rolfe

ROUGH AND READY

One of the most attractive photographs the Rolfe has ever had, is announced for two days beginning Sunday, when William Farnum's production, "Rough and Ready," takes the screen.

Farnum, of course, is the favorite of everyone with any knowledge of "Who's Who on Stage and Screen." He is without a peer in his field and has long been established as America's most popular dramatic actor.

Bill Stratton, whom Farnum portrays, is a man whose heart is as big and as clear as the great, cold Northland into which he goes to forget a lost love. He comes to Yellow Gulch a rough mining settlement perched in the snows, to rest from the weariness of the trail. A trick of fate brings to the place the girl he loved back East. Again Bill fights to win her—and succeeds against odds and obstacles that would have daunted any less sturdy than he.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank all who kindly gave their assistance in finding the body of our loved one. Also for their sympathy and floral offerings, in our recent bereavement.
