SPEAKING OF MONEY

Just How the Goodfields— The Stingiest Couple in Town— Helped the Red Cross

By BOOTH TARKINGTON
Of the Vigilantes.

"Speaking of money," said my seafaring friend of the Maine coast, "we used to have an old man here named Goodfield. When he was young he used to sing in the church choir—that didn't cost nothin'—and married one of the Emberses, but didn't have only one child, and it died, and then he got to be about sixty-eight years old and saved up and was brin' out his money at about as high a p'cent, as anybody. Made it all just trutin' and bein' careful what he spent. 'Careful' He wouldn't buy himself a pair of britches but once in eight years, and when his old sister that lived with em says one day she was bound to see what the inside the pitcher show theater looked like just once before she died, why, old Goodfield and his wife says that was the last straw, and they fixed up and had her hauled off to live on the county. His wife was just the same as him, too.

"He said it just like that—nothin' before it—and I said, 'For the Lord's sake, Mr. Goodfield, what's the matter?' He looked kind of funny to me. 'I'm worth a hundred and twenty-four thousand three hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty-one cents,' he says.
"Well, by Gory! I says.
"Well, sir, he began to 'bont like he'd been runnin' up a hill, he got to beavin' like a winded horse, then he began to cry and sob like a woman that's all excited when some one's just died. 'Well, by Gory! I says, 'You better set down and quiet yourself, I says. 'What's the matter?'
"I got to die," he says. "I been sick," he says. "I been sick and I got to die!"
"Well, I says, 'We all got to die.'
"He kept straight on cryin' and pantin' and sobbin'."
"Yes, he says, but I never knowed I had to! I never knowed it before I was sick. I kind o' thought I wouldn't reely haf to, when it come right down to it.
"We're all fixed that way, I says. 'We all got to have some sickness we won't get over.'
"Well, sir, he let out a yell that just about rose my hair. 'The rest of you ain't got a hundred and twenty-four thousand three hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty-one cents!' he hollers. 'And I got to die!' he says; and he kept on kind o' shoutin' it. 'I got to die! I got to die! I got to die! I got to die!' And then he pitches over before I could catch him and fell down on a couple o' busted lobster traps.

"The Cap. Whitecomb, he woke up in his shack next door and put on some clo'es and come in lookin' scared to death. Hid and me picked Goodfield up off the traps and got him home, half carryin' him, and him kind o' whimperin' and slobberin' right on to when we left him doubled up on a rickety chair at his own house.
"Next day he was around. Just about the same as ever, and never said nothin' about nothin', and the week after that he took Fred Owens' bont in for a debt, and you couldn't told there was anythin' the matter with him. What I mean, you couldn't told nothin' on him in daytime, but after dark he'd go shamblin' all around the village, and then when it got late, if he see a light somewheres, he'd go in there and have a spell just the same he had with me. Scared people with them spots, he did.
"The Last of Goodfield's Money.
"Long about September his wife up and surprised everybody, because she went to all the expense of havin' the old man declared insane and hauled off to the asylum. He cut his throat with a piece of broken bottle up there, and the funniest thing happened—they found the old woman dead the same afternoon in their home here. The court gave the estate to a trust company, and I guess that was the end of old Goodfield's hundred and twenty-four thousand three hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty-one cents.
"Well, sir, you know all that about old Mr. and Mrs. Goodfield made a kind of a sensation, as you might call it, and there was quite a good deal of thinkin' and talkin' about it here in the village. There was some that claimed they figured out how it all was meant to mean somethin'.
"Anyway, when the rail come from Halifax last December we sent off nighty near half a carload of first-rate clothin' right in a few hours, and there was two hundred and seventy-old dollars' worth of it in the village, and you know there wasn't hard by any of us real sure we could see the winter through ourselves.
"Yes, I'll put my name down for the Red Cross, and I'll shell out. I guess you won't have much trouble gittin' subscriptions from the rest, either. I've got a good many boys from here over there now, and we wouldn't like to think of em shot and layin' out in the fields twistin' around and nobody to tend 'em because us at home hadn't found out yet that it's a mistake to think we're still goin' to have our sweeten's right nice and with us when we're dead!"

ROMANCE IN RUSKIN'S LIFE

Divergent Religious Views for Long Time Separated Him From the Woman He Loved.

In 1898 Ruskin declared his love for Rosie La Touche and told her parents of his hope to make her his wife, says J. Howard Whitehouse in Scribner's. There was a great difference of years between them. Ruskin was forty-seven; Rosie was in her eighteenth year. There was some natural hesitation on the part of the parents, and it was arranged that the matter should be postponed for three years.

But when the period of probation ended new difficulties arose. There was hesitation not only on the part of the parents, but also by Rosie. Miss La Touche was of a deeply religious nature, but her views were orthodox and she did not share the wider views on spiritual questions in which Ruskin increasingly believed.

Her love for him had never wavered since the days of her childhood; but she doubted if, holding the views she did, she could marry him. Both she and Ruskin suffered the deepest distress.

For a little time there was estrangement, and there is a moving entry in Ruskin's diary in the year 1870: "Last Friday about twelve o'clock at noon my mistress passed me and would not speak." In the following year there was reconciliation. The end of Ruskin's dream came in 1875. Miss La Touche's health never strong, began to fail, and she died in May of that year.

Could Not Save Comrade.

A fruitless but daring attempt to rescue a man under the most unfavorable conditions was recently made by William B. Ranford, a seaman of the national naval volunteers, and Alton J. Jackson, a wardrobe cook. The man lost was a seaman named W. A. Wells. He slipped and fell overboard from the forward turret of the U. S. S. Iowa. It was cold weather and the water was full of floating ice. Nevertheless Ranford and Jackson went overboard after the man, but were too late to save him from drowning.

Something to Worry About.

As if we haven't already enough to keep our minds busy, with war and the high cost of living! And our friends, the learned astronomers, who study the heavens just as carefully as the average fellow does the innermost recesses of his pocketbook day before yesterday, are intent upon adding to our load of worry burdens. They—some of them—believe the sun is going to explode. One of them, writing in Popular Astronomy, points to the fact that our sun is of advanced age, and predicts its finish as the leading figure in our solar system. He finds that our sun has contracted 52,000,000 miles from each side, thus giving its hot center 180,000,000 miles less of room. So you see the sun's center is rather crowded for space. Something like the three-room apartment couple when visiting relatives begin their summer vacation drives.—Syracuse Journal.
