PRACTICAL PACIFISM

Events show that the German peace bid has weakened the enemy as much as it has strengthened the allies.

The Central Empires have, by plain implication, announced that they want to quit because they cannot win. The civilian population seeing the government give up the hope of victory, loses its will to endure further privations. The army loses its fighting spirit.

"If the government doesn't want to fight any more," the soldiers say "we should we?" Germans captured within the last few days have uttered these very words.

Some of the German troops still fight with their old spirit, but the majority of them seem to show a letting-down, a relaxation of effort, a loss of will to win. This demoralization, together with the increased confidence of the allied troops, has much to do with the sweeping victories we are now winning.

Thus German peace talk is hastening peace in a way that the Kaiser never intended—by making it easier to smash Germany. On with the war! Our soldiers are the best pacifists.

NO MORE BREST-LITOVSKS

When Germany made the "treaty" of Brest-Litovsk, her statesmen thought they were achieving a masterpiece. So they were—a masterpiece of perfidy which Germany cannot outlive for a thousand years. Brest-Litovsk, instead of a German triumph, proves to be the chief obstacle to the peace which Germany in her hour of defeat and despair, craves. If the allies refuse all belief in Germany's good faith, it is chiefly because they remember Brest-Litovsk.

Germany had persuaded Russia to stop fighting and make peace. She had done it by taking up Russia's own cry of "no annexations, no conquests, no indemnities." Germany professed faith in those principles, and promised to write them into a treaty guaranteeing Russia an honorable peace, with freedom to work out her own destiny. The Russians, in their blind faith, with their new visions of human brotherhood, trusted Germany, and trusted the Bolsheviks to speak for them.

We all know what happened. The German mailed fist was banged on the conference table at Brest-Litovsk. The German sword was swung. German diplomats backed by German generals compelled the signing of a document that tore Russia to pieces, gave Germany her richest provinces and provided for the collection of a staggering indemnity. Germany disregarded the armistice she had signed, even during the conference. Afterward, she disregarded every pledge made by her in that treaty, and having tricked the Russian army into demobilization, proceeded to shoot, burn, loot and annex Russia at her leisure.

How can any government or any people trust Germany after that? France, England, Italy and the United States are not Russia. Our eyes are open. And among allied leaders there are no Lenines and Trotskys. Therefore there will be no repetition of Brest-Litovsk.

Discovered in 1735.

Platinum was discovered in what is now Colombia in 1735, by a Spaniard named Don Antonio de Ulloa, who accompanied a French scientific expedition, and his account of it was the first information regarding the metal to be brought to the attention of Europeans.

In the placer mining of gold in Colombia it was formerly thrown away as waste, and when the rise in price made it more valuable than gold the ground on which the waste had been thrown became in its turn a field for mining operations, and even the streets of the principal center of gold refining in Colombia, Quibdo, were torn up and the soil washed for particles of the new treasure. One man tore down his store in order to get at the ground beneath, and found so much platinum that he was enabled to rebuild and make an extra $4,000 for his trouble.
