INGRATITUDE

A member of the German delegation which entered the French lines to sign the armistice complains bitterly of the lack of warmth and courtesy shown by the French officers.

"All the hostility and fullness of hate for our country that seem now to be cherished in France," he says, "came to expression in the form of the negotiations as well as in the terrible nature of the conditions."

He does not accuse the French representatives of saying insulting and humiliating things to the Germans. But there were no kindly greetings, no friendly proffers of any sort, nothing to lessen the embarrassment of the Germans.

Marshal Foch's only greeting was, "Here, gentlemen, is what you need," referring to tables and maps. No negotiations was allowed. Those coarse Frenchmen insisted on "dictating" everything.

"The enemy maintained in the persons of all his representatives the same objective. Their coldness was mitigated by no single word that bordered on the human. The English admiral adopted the tone of the French; and only from Marshal Foch's chief of staff, who bore the Alsation name of Weygand, did we perhaps receive any greater politeness."

It can readily be imagined how the tender hearts of those Germans must have been lacerated by such brutality. And alas! There is no hope to offer them. They will undoubtedly meet with the same uncivil treatment at the peace conference—except possibly from some allied representative who bearing a Teutonic name, may understand gemuetlichkeit and sittlichkeit as well as schrecklichkeit, and know how to be courteous to babykillers.

The World Moves On

Printers thought the typesetting machine was not practical—

The horse breeder said the automobile would never be in general use—

The wire manufacturer said "wireless" was a dream—

Even congressmen said "heavier-than-air" flying machines were impossible—

The last to be disturbed by the wheels of progress is the single-record phonograph manufacturer, who says the playing of all records on one machine "cannot be done."

"Cannot Be Done"

is now in the scrap heap, for—

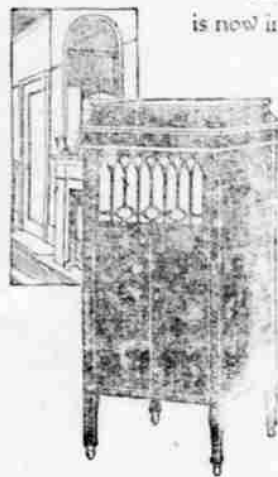

The Brunswick does it!

It attracts the eye. It pleases the ear.

It plays all records at their best.

It is All Phonographs in One
