GERMANS MUST SALUTE.

The American army of occupation in Germany started in with the declared intention of interfering with German life and customs as little as possible. The police work was, at best, distasteful to our troops. They had no impulse to overdo it, as the Germans have done wherever they have been in authority over a foreign population. There was no desire to bother or humiliate the natives unnecessarily.

The motives and practices of those Americans are a credit to them and to their country. But they found that their fine ideals would not work. The German population did not react to their tolerance and generosity as an American, French or Belgium population would have done. To the Germans, tolerance meant laxity. They decided that the Americans were "easy," and proceeded to take advantage of them accordingly.

The result was that the American army has adopted the same strict rules enforced by the occupying French and British armies to govern the German population. The German officers, soldiers, railroad workers and policemen are required to salute all officers in allied uniform in the American zone of occupation, and the people are required to go home early and obey other rules far stricter than those first imposed.

It is done, frankly, for the moral effect on the German people. And it will probably be good for them. If only Wilhelm, Hindenburg and Tiritzi were there to salute the boys in khaki!

ALLEGED MURDERER IS PLACED ON TRIAL TODAY

PORTLAND, Jan. 7.—J. Cyril Laird, alleged murderer, train robber, and blackmailer, was placed on trial in circuit court here today on the charge of murdering Deputy Sheriff Frank Twombly the night of November 19.

Laird, it is alleged, killed the deputy sheriff while speeding through East Portland, following his act of robbing the gatekeeper at the Interstate bridge. Twombly had no idea Laird was a robber, merely chasing him as a speeder. The gatekeeper at the bridge was relieved of $123.

Agusta Carlson, who had posed as the wife of Laird for several months, preceding his arrest, is said by the police to have confessed that Laird robbed the bridge gatekeeper and killed Twombly. The police say she declared she feared that if Laird were not arrested he would kill her because of her knowledge of his crimes. It is also said she implicated Laird in the holdup of a Great Northern train near Seattle last September, and in a blackmailing scheme against prominent citizens of Portland.

The man who went on trial today faces the following charges: Second-degree murder, highway robbery, train robbery, larceny of government bonds, desertion from the army and violation of his parole from the Walla Walla penitentiary.

It is predicted that Laird's defense will be that Agusta Carlson "framed" the case against him to protect the real murderer, whom she loves more than she does Laird, with whom she lived as his wife. It is believed the defense will attempt to stamp Miss Carlson as an adventuress who craved a life of luxury and used Laird as a cat paw.

CANINE HEROES HAD TO DIE

Dire Necessity Forced the Monks of St. Bernard to Put Their Dogs to Death.

All but six of the famous St. Bernard dogs kept by the monks of that ancient monastery in the Alps have been killed. Shortage of meat caused by the war led to this massacre.

The St. Bernard pass is of historical renown. It connects the valleys of the Rhone and the Dora Baltea. It was traversed by Roman legions thousands of years ago. In medieval times the pass served the armies of conquerors and the bands of mercenaries. Napoleon crossed the Alps at this point in 1800.

The great monastery was built in the middle of the sixteenth century. It was maintained for the relief of travelers who were surprised by snowstorms while crossing the pass. The St. Bernard dogs were used to find the frozen victims of the storms in the snowdrifts. They were specially trained for this work of relief and carried the first aid to the injured in a little basket attached to their collars. These dogs rescued thousands of human beings, many of whom were of historical prominence. And for the first time in the history of this famous monastery the dogs had to be slaughtered for want of food. At other times a report of this sort would create profound interest in Paris, but at present the human race is thinking of its own necessities and cares less about dog heroes living more than 8,100 feet above the surface of the sea.

CORNCOBBS PUT TO GOOD USE

Belief That They Can Be Made the Nucleus of a Great and Profitable Industry.

Corn-cobs—a great waste product in the world's greatest corn-producing nation—have been made to yield adhesive gum and other useful substances in quantities sufficient to convince chemists of the United States department of agriculture that the nucleus of a profitable and important industry lies in this direction.

In addition to adhesive gum, experiments have produced cellulose and glucose, both of which have many commercial uses. The glucose so produced crystallizes well, and it is believed can be used in the same ways as crystalline glucose from starch. Manufacture of alcohol by the fermentation of corn-cob glucose appears practicable if sulphuric acid is obtainable cheaply.

To utilize corn-cobs commercially, the chemists believe, a large and costly plant would be necessary, and the loss of chemistry does not advise any enterprise of the sort in war time.

Explaining Shower of Fishes.

A recent shower of fishes at Hendon, a suburb of Sunderland, England, occurred about 3 p. m., during a heavy thunderstorm, and lasted about ten minutes. A Meek of Dove Marine laboratory, states in Nature that the fall was confined to an area of about a third of an acre. The fishes were all about three inches long and all swarmed, a marine species often present in great shoals along the English beaches. The place of fall is a quarter of a mile from the seashore. It is found probable that the fishes, numbering several hundred, were drawn by a waterpout from the bay to the southeast and transported by the easterly breeze at least half a mile. As the fishes were all "lead the evidence that inland waters may have been stored with marine forms from the air is not conclusive.

Useless Precaution.

A German captain of engineers relates how he once sent a green corporal and three men back to the Russian lines with instructions to put a railroad station completely out of commission so that it could by no means be of use to the enemy.

The corporal rejoined the command in a surprisingly short time considering the nature of the task. The captain asked if he had carried out his instructions.

"Ja wohl, Herr Hauptmann," said the corporal, "the Russians will never be able to use that station again. You see," pointing to a large sack on his back, "I have carried away all the tickets."—London Opinion.

How It Would Help.

The "patriot" who talked a lot and did very little was holding forth as usual.

"I'm thinking seriously of offering my motorboat to the government," he bellowed.

"Do you mean the boat you had me out in last summer when the engine stopped and we had to row ten miles back?" asked his friend.

"Yes, that's the one."

"Well, if you want to do your country a service," said the friend earnestly, "you should have given that boat to the Germans."

Must Find Work for Soldiers. PORTLAND, Jan. 6.—A bread line Portland this winter unless employers come to the rescue and help the government find work for returning soldiers immediately.

Wilfred Smith, chief of the United States employment service here, issued this warning today. The official announcement of the war department a few days ago means that 30,000 of the 40,000 Oregon men who are in the service, will be home soon. Most of these heroes will have to look for jobs. From the present indications, only about 5,000 can be accommodated.

So Smith urges employers of all kinds to immediately list every job in Portland and vicinity with the government employment bureau.
