they needed fuel and food, and five back to repair a boiler they'd burnt out.

"Then we started our eight months' cruise. First they sailed around Africa, attacking defenseless vessels wherever they found them. The Wolff was equipped with fine wireless instruments, and they could detect fighting ships at long distances. The Wolff kept away from fighting ships, and we never had a fight during the entire cruise.

"Altogether they captured and sunk 14 defenseless boats, between Samoa and around Africa, across to South America, and up the coast almost to Iceland. The Germans wanted to go north of Iceland and along Scandinavia toward home, but the ice flows wouldn't allow it. So they took a chance south of Iceland and pulled up just north of Denmark.

"By that time the Wolff had laid more than 400 mines around Australia and along the east coast of South and North America. They laid up a week near Denmark, waiting for orders to proceed to Kiel, and when the demonstration was all prepared, she pulled up to the harbor. There were salutes by the men of war, and everything was decorated. They sent down a carload of iron crosses from Berlin, and everyone got them, even the cooks.

"We were ready to quit cooking, tho it wasn't much to look at, going to Germany. Out at sea we'd run pretty close to the boards sometimes, but we always prayed to bring along a ship, and one came along, and we had food to live on, sometimes good and sometimes bad.

"Well, those of us who were prisoners were sent to camp. I had a crew of Swede sailors and a Japanese cook. The German hired the Swedes to work on the Wolff and the Jap was imprisoned with the crew of a Japanese liner. They put me in a military officers' camp because I was considered a dangerous character.

"I was on the Wolff eight months, which meant freedom of the decks when we weren't in action, and then they put all the prisoners in the hatch and stationed half a dozen Germans at the door with grenades to throw if we showed any fuss. I've been in several German camps during the last year, but longest at Villingen.

"I'm not much on this military stuff and I don't salute anybody but Germans, and then because I want to live to go back to San Francisco. They call me captain and salute, but it's all overboard, this saluting, now that we're away from the Germans.

"It was a good enough experience, but at my age I'm not looking for experiences. I've had to fight with all kinds of nationalities since I've been prisoner, just to get food, and some times it was pretty rough. But there's no kick coming from me, just as I get back to the Bay alive and find the Old Woman. Then we're going to Market street and celebrate, and after that it's my own yard, and inside of that, for me."

In his travels the captain has acquired an Iron Cross and sundry other German medals, which he says are cheaper than bread in Germany. For a cake of soap you can get a barrel of them. He is bringing back a collection of souvenirs for the Golden Gate museum.

WOMAN TO RESUME STUDY AFTER LAPSE OF 21 YEARS

U. of O., Jan. 13.—Special.—Twenty one years ago Susan Gibbs laid down her work in the University after two years in the academic prep department and one and a half in the University proper. Now, as Mrs. Susan R. Lewis of Dexter she is applying to the extension division to complete her interrupted work.

While in college she took a course in science. She asks for a statement of her standing and information regarding correspondence study. She inquires how long it will take her to finish the course she began 21 years ago.

HOUSEWIFE BUT STUDENT REFUSES TO LEAVE HIS BED

U. of O., Jan. 13.—Special.—"Get up, Doc! the house is a-fire." This at 6:15 a. m., which is beginning to seem early again these days of reveille-less peace.

"That so? Well, if it gets serious, let me know," and Don Oxman, of the Alpha Tau Omega, turned over and sought slumber. A little later he was routed out by a hurry.

The fire burned more than $2,000 worth.

GRADUATE WINNS HONOR

U. of O., Jan. 13.—Special.—Among the 1918 men honored Dec. 17 by the award of the Legion d'honneur de guerre for war service was Lieut. Ben F. Dorris of Co. F, 262d Inf. Dorris, whose home is in Eugene, is a graduate of the U. of O., class of '15, and a brother of Miss Ruth Dorris of the University business office.

R. O. T. C. DRILL TO BEGIN AT UNIVERSITY THIS WEEK

U. of O., Jan. 13.—Special.—Military drill in the U. of O. under the auspices of the Reserve Officers' training corps, will begin this week, with an enrollment of 350. Most of these are members of the first and second year classes, for whom three hours military work a week is prescribed.

Case Dismissed—

Sometime ago Chas. G. Brown, ex-posed cop of Albany, filed a petition in the juvenile court asking that his child, Virgil Brown, then in the custody of her mother, Ruth Brown, be declared a dependent child. At that time the house in which the mother was living was quarantined for influenza and a hearing could not be set; and since that time the father and mother have adjusted matters and the case was today ordered dismissed from court.
