PRINCIPLES OF BOLSHIEVISM

People who have been trying, without much success, to learn precisely what Bolshievism stands for, may derive enlightenment from the statement of Dr. Oudendijk, Dutch minister in Petrograd. As interviewed by the London Times, he says:

"Translated into practice, the five points of Bolshievism really come to this: (1) High wages; (2) don't work; (3) take other people's property; (4) no punishment; (5) no taxation."

He speaks from long acquaintance and careful observation of the old regime and the new. He has known Russia for 30 years. And as a result of more than a year of Bolshievism "never have the working classes of Russia suffered as they are suffering at the present moment. I have never seen or dreamed of the possibility of such corruption, tyranny and the absence of all semblance of freedom as there are in Russia now."

He concludes that the future of Russia is hopeless. But surely there is hope even in the extremity of such an evil situation. A social and political disease when it becomes bad enough tends to cure itself. Surely the Russian masses will understand, sooner or later, the origin of the evils they suffer, and repudiate the system which is responsible before they themselves are utterly destroyed. If we are tempted to lose our faith not merely in human nature but in that common sense which is supposed to be the heritage of all races.
