KEEPING A PLEDGE

In all this argument for and against a league of nations, a good many people have quite overlooked the fact that the question was really settled when the armistice was signed.

The allied governments explicitly declared "their willingness to make peace with the government of Germany on the terms of peace laid down in the President's address to congress of January 8, 1918, and the principles enunciated in his subsequent addresses." There were qualifications made with regard to only two points, freedom of the seas and compensation to be paid by Germany. The allies accepted as it stood the 14th point of the January 8 address, which reads, "A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small nations alike."

Germany agreed to the armistice including that provision, and largely because of it. If the allies were to repudiate it in the peace conference they would be making a "mere scrap of paper" of one of their plainest and most binding pledges.

The strange thing about it is that anybody, in any of the countries concerned, should have seemed, even for a moment, to contemplate repudiating that formal pledge, made by the allies to the United States and made by all of us to our enemies, with the whole world for witness, and accepted at the time as a matter of course.

NEW U-BOATS

Allied commissioners charged with carrying out the naval terms of the armistice found, on visiting Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, that the Germans were building more submarines. They had some finished and other under construction, in out-of-the-way places which they evidently expected would be overlooked.

What those new U-boats were being built for is an interesting question. It was supposed that Germany had learned her lesson.

Now the allied governments are taking no further chances. The new terms require the surrender of all submarines already built and the destruction of those on the ways, and there will be close supervision to see that the trick is not repeated.

The Germans will now have a chance to devote all their shipbuilding energies to the construction of the merchantmen which they say they need so urgently.

DEVIL DOGS IN ARCTIC

VERY MUCH AT HOME
LONDON, Jan. 21.—American marines have taken over the policing of the city of Archangel, according to J. P. Steele, American military attache who returned today from there.

American movies are doing a big business in Archangel, he said.

Yankee soldiers are patrolling the strange streets of the Arctic city with as much of an at home air as if they were doing duty in St. Louis. The city is under military government.

Altho order is maintained, the food situation is critical. The quantities of foodstuffs shipped in by the allies are to a great extent out of the reach of the poor, owing to prices.

Steele had to pay 50 rubles for an ordinary dinner and 80 rubles for a breakfast of coffee, bread and porridge.

SHELBY ITEMS

SHELBY, Jan. 21.—Special.—With the reappointment of J. W. Hiron as patrolman, many are looking forward for the completion of quite a bit of road. Last year the local tax was not available until too late to use, which added to this year's will make the work worth while. If the county gravel hauling outfit can be procured a great deal more rock can be laid than the old method with teams.

When such questions are discussed and it is shown that the tractor will deliver ten to 15 loads to a team's one and at about the same variation of cost, you will often hear some old retired farmers in the crowd wanting to

Mr. and Mrs. Roadarmel, who are spending their honeymoon here with her children, were detained a couple of weeks with the flu. They returned to their home in Milwaukee this Monday morning.

Ardee Powell, who lived near Seio, became a victim of the flu, and was buried here Sunday.

The flu seems to have a grudge against young men and women when they are reaching the most useful period of their lives. His place in his community will be hard to fill.

Mrs. A. Shank has been confined to her bed for over two weeks with bronchial pneumonia.

Arthur McLaine began school again after being out a week with a severe cold.

J. W. Maze went to Portland on business last week.

Mrs. John Bass is visiting her sister and mother at Gates.

Mrs. Rose Miller has been confined to her bed for several weeks, but is reported better.
