every section of our country, now is the time, when the nations of the world are looking to the United States as their exemplar of the highest type of unity and real democracy! Let us hear no more of this talk of Southern democrats and Northern republicans—we are all Americans! The Mason and Dixon line was never anything but an imaginary line. It was never intended to separate the two great sections of this country—and the man today who seeks in any way to divide us, is a traitor, for there is no north, no south, no east, no west, but one great republic, which finds in the hearts of its people patriotic pride, unchanging loyalty and unflinching devotion to the highest principles of human liberty. Americans all! One country, one people, one flag!

Thoughts in Music.

A girl, artistic to her very fingertips, had been "learning to play the piano" for six years, and had come to hate music. She was a victim of the prevalent mechanical mode of teaching. On being questioned, she admitted that there was one thing that interested her—a tune written by herself. "I loved to do it, and I can sing it." Here she had used her own initiative, and the exercise of it had made her happy. Teachers will find that all children are interested in thinking music, and that the interest grows where otherwise it is apt to flag. The value of folk-songs is diluted on, and the author has found that boys like the Wagner motives, some of which are as simple as folk-songs.

The Greyhound.

The greyhound was first used as a good producer for its owners. It was necessary to have a dog that could run fast to capture animals for food, when weapons were in their infancy. There was no sense of points nor any typical lines on which this dog was bred. As a matter of fact utility was the foundation of all the great breeds of greyhounds. A wide-chested, straight-shouldered, black-furred, powerful dog is unable to run fast and a dog that had those faults could not do what the greyhound does. And that is the reason why some form of greyhound can be traced back as far as we have any dog history.

TWO AGES ACTIVE

IN OLD PALESTINE

JERUSALEM, Jan. 27.—The life of two periods, distant by many centuries, flows along the roads that lead to this ancient city.

The camel, tho he has done great things for the British forces, is losing his position as the main means of transport, and the natives driving their camels carrying huge packs of eastern merchandise, are passed by the big engines of the evergrowing British broadgauge railway, at which the country people stare with openmouthed astonishment. Then along will come an Assyrian or an Arab on his donkey or mule, his wife walking behind and carrying a great pack on her head. In this way they transport much stuff for many miles. Now they are smothered in dust from the great quantity of motor transport on the roads.

The five barley loaves and small fishes still have to feed a good many people in this country and women may still be seen grinding their scanty cup of corn between stones, but now with the introduction of good seed the country is showing signs of vast improvement. Cotton is still made up into rough material in a primitive method on a kind of bow. With the new opportunities now opening up the old spinner is likely to be looking for another job.

Already in quite small towns you will see the name of well known London firms. This has aroused the local shops to a kind of competition and all kinds of important signs over small shops, with hardly anything to sell, announce: "The London Stores, Stationary and Other Provisions," "The Up-to-date Hosiery and Dry Goods Store," "The Manchester House," and many similar. It is doubtful if five per cent of the customers can read the signs.

Shepherds on the hills still tend their flocks, dressed in camel hair, and nightly fold them and light their fires to keep off the prowling jackals and hyenas. But in the future much of this rich land now practically barren, is likely to receive the attention of the steam tractor.

Altogether, with the present means of transport by rail, the great improvement in the water supply and the rapid introduction of European methods and customs, it may be hoped a year or two of peace will change this desert into a real land of milk and honey.

CLAIM BLOOD OF ROMANS

Tuaregs of the Sahara Desert Are Supposed to Be Descended From Once World Rulers.

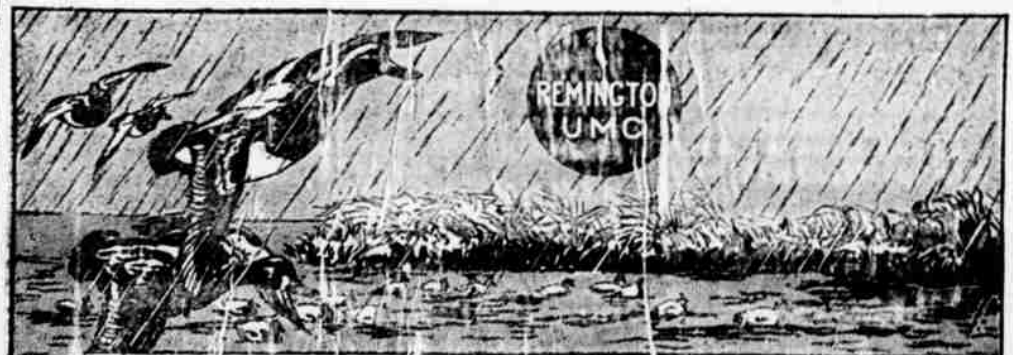

The original gunmasked people of the world are the Tuaregs of the Sahara desert—a strange race, supposed to be descended from the Roman colonists of North Africa and the Arabs who carried the standard of Mohammed into the wilderness 1,200 years ago. An immense and almost unknown country is held by the Tuaregs, a fierce fighting people, who range on swift camels from Algeria to Timbuctoo. Tales are told of white-walled cities in the Tuareg lands, with Roman theaters, circuses and baths still standing as the Romans left them, and now the haunt of the Tuareg tribesmen.

The mystery that surrounds the Tuaregs is doubled by their custom of always going masked. A mask of white or black cloth covers the mouth and nostrils, and, so the Tuaregs say, protects them from the dust and wind-blown sand of the desert, from the poisonous vapors of the Niger valleys, and, no doubt, from the disease germs which float so freely in the filthy towns of Africa. Certain it is that infectious diseases ravage other North African people, while the Tuaregs maintain magnificent health from year to year. Few travelers have ever seen the Tuaregs unmasked. Those who have declare that they are as white as European, and decidedly handsome, their pale skins doubtless being largely due to the mask which keeps off the burning sun.
