FIVE HOURS A DAY

The head of the Canadian delegation to the International Trades Union conference in Switzerland wants the conference to proclaim a six-hour day and a five-day working week throughout the world. The plan is said to be viewed with favor by many delegates.

It is readily seen that this would give 30 working hours a week, and on the usual basis of a six-day week would mean an average of five hours' work a day.

This is merely an extreme presentation of a view that is widely prevalent, finding expression in varying degree in nearly every country in the world. It represents an attitude on the part of the industrial class which is extremely unfortunate at this time, because it is based on logical thinking and is opposed to the welfare of all society, including the industrial workers themselves.

What the world needs today, above everything else, is increased production. It needs more coal, more iron, more copper, more food, more manufactured commodities of all sorts. The war has been hugely destructive. The destruction must give way to construction. Things must be replaced. The crying needs of civilized society must be met. And how can the great deficit of railroads and factories and houses and sewers and paving and clothing and furniture and hardware and the rest be made up unless, for a while, everybody works hard?

It is not necessary to work at the killing pace required during the war; but it is necessary to work harder and more steadily than in the years immediately preceding the war, until the necessary goods have been supplied.

No reasonable man will contend for more than an eight-hour day. In the majority of trades, no reasonable man today should demand less. When the current necessities and the material wealth of the world have been restored to normal, it will be time to think about a general reduction of the working time.

Producing less will not remedy anything. To produce less is suicidal. The remedy for present economic evils is for the people who work with their hands and the people who work with their heads all to work together more intelligently and energetically, in a cooperative effort to produce more—and to divide it a little more equitably.

Those ferocious Russian 'Reds' now seem to be turning to a mild shade of pink.

SOLDIERS BECOME SAILORS

It is reported that discharged soldiers are showing a keen interest in sea service. So far about 3,000 of them have signed up for work with the navy or merchant marine. Others are expected to follow their example right along.

Most of these men need special training. For that purpose the schools and training ships are continuing their work, turning out deck officers and marine engineers and seamen.

This go-to-sea movement is interesting. Apparently the ex-soldiers do not hesitate at all to hire out to Uncle Sam for further service. The sea-going life, too, seems to hold more attraction for them than farm projects. It meets the requirements for change and adventure and outdoor life which they crave. Incidentally the prospects are bright for the future of America on the seas.

Here to Locate—

Joe Johnson, of near Poplar, Mont., has been employed in the Holman & Jackson grocery store. Mr. Johnson and two brothers-in-law are here to locate and may buy farms in this vicinity.

To Meet Brother—

Mrs. C. B. Price went to Portland Sunday to meet her brother, Loren Davis, who is a member of the 65th artillery.

To See Soldiers—

Miss Eva Hughes went to Portland Sunday and today will meet her brother, George, who will arrive with Battery E, 65th artillery.

CITY NEWS

To Live in Texas—

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Marsha and little son of this city left today for El Paso, Texas, to make their home.

Floyd Shortridge Here Sunday—

Floyd Shortridge, formerly of this city, who has been in Seattle in the navy, spent a few hours in Albany yesterday. He returned recently from overseas, where he was on duty for several months, and is now employed in the Northwest Steel company yards at Portland. Mrs. Shortridge and baby are in Seaside. They expect to visit Albany in a few weeks and perhaps locate here.

Week-End Guests—

Mrs. Irwin Clapp and daughter Thelma of Mill City were guests for the week-end at the W. L. Twitchell home.

Here for Day—

Mrs. D. D. Pitman of Corvallis was in Albany Saturday.

Here From Portland—

Bert Stevens spent Sunday in the city, returning to Portland last night. Polk County Farmer Here—

Robert Walker and family, a progressive farmer of Perrydale, Polk county, spent the weekend visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kimsey of West Sixth street. Mr. Walker has been renting the farm of W. A. Kimsey for several years and is one of the live wires of Polk county. In addition to farming approximately 400 acres of land, Mr. Walker has a large number of sheep, runs a threshing machine and hay baler during the harvest season, and also buys grain and hay for the Portland market. Mr. Walker is a strong advocate of the farm tractor and standard public highways.

Gets Good Position—

Jack Nash, who was recently released from service at the naval training station at Seattle, arrived in the city Saturday and will spend a few days visiting relatives. He has been appointed assistant state engineer of Idaho and leaves next week to assume his new duties. Mr. Nash is a graduate of O. A. C.

Here Saturday—

I. Umphrey and wife of Corvallis were in Albany to spend Saturday.

Out of the Army—

Ed Chrs arrived home from the army Friday, having received his discharge. He was in the service about six months, and until the armistice was declared the work was very heavy. He feels glad to get home in time to prepare for spring farming. Ed looks as if Uncle Sam furnished his boys good cats.—Tribune.

Oakland Mayor Dies—

Mrs. W. J. Looney received a message Monday announcing the sudden death of her brother, J. T. Bridges, mayor of Oakland, Oregon, one of the most popular men of that section. Mr. and Mrs. Looney left Tuesday for Oakland to attend the funeral, which was held Wednesday afternoon.—Jefferson.

Will Need Those Mules—

William Brenner, who drives the span of big mules, says that though feed is scarce and high his mules must have what they need in the feed line. He will have use for them when the farming season opens a few weeks later and he wants them in shape to do business.—Tribune.

Former Albany Girl Highest

Miss Constance Nicholls, a former Albany girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Nicholls, graduated from the Jefferson high school this week with the highest honors, not only of her school but of the entire city. Her average for the four years of high school was 98½, a remarkable record which has probably never been surpassed here. Not only that, but during her four years of high school she was never either absent or tardy. On graduating from the Woodlawn school into the high school she stood the highest in that school. Miss Nicholls left Sunday for Washington, where she has a position awaiting her in the war insurance service. Later she expects to enter college, either in the east or at O. A. C., and certainly has a bright future before her. She has prepared in the classical course, and already speaks French well. A picture of Miss Nicholls, whom the writer took great pleasure in congratulating personally, appeared in Sunday's Oregonian, together with an account of her record. She and her parents left Albany eight or nine years ago. Mr. Nicholls is in the commission business. They continue to own property in Albany.

Floyd Shortridge, of Albany, arrived in Portland Friday on his way to Astoria to join his wife. He has been in the navy, recently being discharged. He had the experience of crossing the Atlantic several times and certainly looked well after his varied experiences.

A new deputy collector in the internal revenue service is Will F. Hammer, of Hood River, a former county clerk of Linn County, and brother of A. M. Hammer of the L. E. Blain Clothing Co.

Went to Portland—

W. A. Eastburn went to Portland yesterday to be there when the 65th division stops, en route to Camp Lewis.

Home From Newport—

Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Woodworth returned to Albany yesterday, after spending several days in Newport.
