MAKING UP THE WAR LOSS

It is estimated that the world war has destroyed wealth, directly and indirectly, amounting to anywhere from $200,000,000 to $260,000,000,000. One can come nearest, perhaps to forming some adequate notion of what these figures mean by considering that they represent about as much wealth as there is in the United States.

Take all the land values in this country. Take all the mineral deposits, and timber and water-power sites and other natural resources. Take all the improvements. Take all the physical property real and personal, owned by this great, wealthy nation of over 100,000,000 people. Take all the theoretical value, the "good will," etc. Take all the money, all the clothing, all the food. Take everything, tangible and intangible, for which we are willing today to pay each other money. Imagine the United States as an economic entity utterly wiped out of existence. That is the extent of this war's destruction.

With the nations knit together as they are, the burden of such destruction falls upon all the world. It falls most of all upon the rich, productive, industrial nations. It falls upon the American people in proportion to their share of the world's wealth, and in proportion to their wealth-producing power.

The whole human race has to make up this enormous loss. The race has to produce another United States of America, so to speak, before it will break even and be able to go ahead economically, accumulating wealth and ease beyond the levels of July, 1914.

We cannot avoid our share of it. If we do not, individually or nationally, help make up the deficit by active production ourselves, we must make up our share in higher prices over longer periods.

It follows that everybody, for years, has got to work harder if this stupendous deficit is to be made and the race is to go ahead in the comforts, conveniences and securities of life.

And in this economic crisis there are millions of men who want to reduce their working time to six or five hours a day!

To relax effort now will mean confirming the world in its war-born poverty and bringing it to paralysis, despair and chaos.

The only way to get mankind out of the hole in which the war has left it is for every man and woman to face the facts, be square, summon up resolution and set to work, until that vast war loss is made up. Then we can relax.

WOMEN SHOULD RAISE STOCK

The woman who is tired of an ordinary occupation should investigate the animal-raising business. Women are better fitted for it as a rule than men. They have more patience, and the coddling end of it appeals to them.

It is not necessary to go east or west. All one needs is to obtain room enough for a small beginning and go to work.
 One woman has proved herself successful at horse-raising that she has been appointed to an important position in the department of agriculture. It is outlook, not opportunity, which limits any woman in these days.

GOOD AUTOMOBILE NUMBER

The Sunday edition of the Eugene Register contains 40 pages, the occasion being the first annual automobile and style show which will be held in the University City Tuesday to Thursday of this week. It is well-edited and liberally patronized and makes a splendid showing for Eugene. During the past week the Register printed 80 pages, which it claims is the largest ever produced in the state in the same length of time outside of Portland. This is made possible by the wide-awake merchants of Eugene, who so thoroughly believe in advertising that they spend large sums of money for space. One merchant in that city told one of the Democrat editors Saturday evening that his firm's advertising bill for last month was more than $500. "It pays," he says, "there is absolutely no question about it, and any merchant who believes he is making the most of his business without it, is absolutely fool!"

Have you ordered your plants for that five or ten acres of strawberries, or loganberries, or any other kind of berries to be set out this spring? It is time to get busy on making the Willamette Valley the world's greatest garden spot. Do your bit. Grow small fruits and vegetables, increase the valley's prosperity and population and incidentally make a comfortable fortune for yourself.

We're likely to wake up any morning now and find that some aerial Columbus has flown across the Atlantic.

OF ANCIENT EGYPT

Interesting Relics Coming to the United States.

Expedition Under the Auspices of the Pennsylvania University Museum Has Been Highly Successful in Its Explorations.

Despite handicaps caused by the war, the Pennsylvania University museum has acquired many relics unearthed at Memphis by its Egyptian expedition. A vessel will be chartered to transport the relics.
 The expedition started on its trip in March, 1915, and continued explorations until last June, when the shortage of labor and the high prices of materials due to the war, caused a cessation in the work.

A representative of the Roumanian government had obtained the concession of the whole site, but the war intervened and the Egyptian expedition offered the university party the choice of any portion. An area near the colossal of Rameses II was selected, because of the discoveries made in that region by an inspector of antiquities for lower Egypt. He had revealed what was apparently the room of a Pharaoh's palace.

Excavations by the party from the university museum proved the building to be the royal residence of Memphitic, who ruled from 1225 B. C. to 1215 B. C. The explorers found three layers of earth, representing the ancient location of as many civilizations. A large Roman city had occupied the site of the topmost layer, underneath which were large masses of masonry belonging to the period estimated to have been 332-30 B. C., and the lowest layer revealed ruins of the palace of Memphitic at a total distance of from sixteen to eighteen feet below the surface level.

The palace, which had been unharmed by the natives, apparently had been a magnificent structure. Limestone was the material used for the columns and framings, while the outer walls were of sun-dried brick. The eastern wing of the palace, which was the first to be excavated, contained magnificently decorated apartments where the Pharaoh and his wife (or wives) spent their time.

The section of the palace that pleased the explorers most was the throne room. Six columns supported its roof, the best preserved having a base of limestone with a horizontal band of inscription laid in pale greenish blue faience. The lower part of the column had a row of sepals in relief springing from a broad band of gold. Between the tips of the sepals were large lotus flowers inlaid in faience.

Panels, showing a procession of Nile gods, bearing vases of water to the Pharaoh, and gilded relief figures of Memphitic, were prominent features of a massive doorway that was unearthed.
 Elaborate colored stucco pavements, walls and small papyrus columns—red, yellow, and blue being the colors of the principal patterns—formed some of the striking interior relief features of the royal residence.

MOTHERS
 Should see that the whole family take at least 3 or 4 doses of a thorough purifying, system cleaning medicine this spring. Now is the time. The family will be healthier, happier, and get along better if the blood is given a thorough purifying, the stomach and bowels cleaned out, and the germs of Winter, accumulated in the system, driven away. Hollister's Rock, Mox's Tea is one of the very best and surest Spring medicines to take. Get it and see the difference in the whole family. Their color will be better, they'll feel fine and be well and happy.

Who Should Worry?

Douglas county would like to see its immense timber resources developed, says the News, but just so long as the owners of these tracts feel like they can go on and on forever paying taxes on their holdings without any incentive toward getting returns, we should worry. The tall forests are a mighty fine place for the 'natives' to hibernate during the balmy summer months.

More Road Paving

The highway commission promises to let on April 15th a contract for paving from Jefferson eight miles north, to what is known as the Barzee hill. If this is done the paving will certainly go on to Salem.—Review.

Reception for Soldiers

The reception for returned soldiers to be given by the members of the Lebanon churches will be held Friday evening, April 11, at the Methodist church. The committees in charge are maturing plans for a big time and as far as possible are giving personal invitations to all soldiers and sailors to be there. In addition they extend to all boys who have seen service and who have not been reached personally a cordial invitation to be there. A splendid program is being arranged for their entertainment.—Criterion.

PROSPERITY FOLLOWS THE WIRES
 Electricity has brought prosperity to hundreds of farms throughout this country. Electric service means "horsepower" instead of "man power"—electric power brings abundant crops, more leisure, greater profits and lighter labor.
 In dry sections, proper irrigation will more than double crops. G-E motors are ideal on irrigation pumps and can also be used to drive various farm machines. G-E motors increase profits by reducing labor cost and saving time.
 Let us show you what electric power with G-E motors can do for you.
