INGALLS' EULOGY OF GRASS

Brilliant Piece of Writing by Famous Kansas Will Forever Hold Place in Literature.

"Lying in the sunshine among the buttercups and dandelions of May, scarcely higher in intelligence than the minute tenants of that mimic wilderness, our earliest recollections are of grass, and when the fitful fever is ended and the foolish wrangle of the market and the forum is closed, grass heals over the scar which our descent into the bosom of earth has made and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead. Grass is the forgiveness of nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruins of cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten.
Streets abandoned by traffic become grass-grown like rural lanes and are obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. Beleaguered by the sullen hosts of winter, it withdraws into the impregnable fortress of its subterranean vitality and emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, by the wandering birds, propagated by the subtle agriculture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outline of the world. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet, should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world."

This classic by John J. Ingalls, was first printed in the Duluth Herald. says the Kansas Magazine, when Senator Ingalls was one of its owners.

STYLE IN EVERY LINE

The conservative woman, while realizing the importance of style, does not interest herself in fads. Printzess coats and suits are built on lines that reflect the latest Parisian styles and yet they are not faddish in any way.

The woman who wears a garment bearing a Printzess label will not only have the happy assurance that she is stylishly dressed but will also appreciate the durability of the lovely all-wool quality materials combined with the finest of tailoring.

The great care taken in every detail of the production of a Printzess garment puts into it many months of excellent service and means that it will hold its stylish lines through several seasons. They are moderately priced too—the best kind of investment.
