How High Will Meat Prices Go?

Swift & Company does not know whether prices will go higher or lower.

It depends upon country-wide and world conditions that Swift & Company cannot control and cannot foresee.

All the world needs meat, and only a small part of the world is raising live stock. So live stock is dear now, and meat prices must keep pace.

Competition will continue to keep the "spread" low so that the price you pay for meat will be as close as possible to what must be paid for live stock.

Our profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound, is no greater when prices are high than when they are low.

Swift & Company, U. S. A.

Venetians Were the First to Put Before World the Nobleness of Gentle Manners.

Pompeo Molmenti, the historian, relates that in the sixteenth century the gentle manners of the Venetian people were evident in every department of daily life, even down to the greetings in the street. The very nobles in the Scola, the period of greatest haughtiness, were wont to salute courteously by raising their cap with the left hand and laying the right on the heart. The populace was always obsequious, especially toward patriots and foreigners, and to every question addressed to them would never answer brusquely. "Yes," but always, "At your service," though this humility of expression implied not so much servility as an inherent courtesy of feeling. The penalties for blasphemy were exceptionally severe. For instance, Benigna, in his memoirs, writes, under June 28, 1724: "A certain Bertelli for having used foul oaths was placed in the pillory and had his tongue cut out." Yet, ceremony in Venice was never allowed to degenerate into ridiculous etiquette. As early as the close of the sixteenth century a resolution was passed forbidding the use of glowing expressions in salutations.
