WHY BUILD NOW?

In spite of prevailing high prices there are two reasons for building now, whether it be a home, a church or a business block which is under consideration.

The first reason is that every builder is a booster, helping to lift business up to its normal level.

The second reason is that the man who builds now can get high-grade labor and good work.

There are many excellent workmen not now employed who, unhurried by pressure of waiting jobs, will do better building than can be got at any price later. When building starts again, full swing, the good workmen will be hurried; the poor workman will be an ever-present evil that must be accepted in order to get work done at all. The result will be just that neglect of details which makes all the difference between permanency and everlasting repairs.

It is a question whether even at present prices it is not better economy to have work done now. An increasingly large number of people are answering that question in the affirmative.

Somebody wants to know who won most glory from the war. Well, what about the Salvation Army?
