CHARM IN PLEASANT VOICE

Point of Personality to Which Most People Seem to Pay Little Attention.

Men and women go to great pains and spend more or less money in an effort to improve their personal appearances. They keep the beauty doctors and the barbers busy to maintain their skins and their hair in good condition. The masseurs make a good living out of almost all of us.

This is, of course, perfectly proper. It is right that we should look as well as it is possible for us to do. We should even be urged to wear very good clothes. Shakespeare, who said everything, said that we should wear good clothes. "Gently thy apparel as thy purse can buy," said he; "the apparel oft proclaims the man." And, certainly, it proclaims the woman.

But there is one very great charm about men and women that they neglect to cultivate, as a rule. It is their voices. If God gives us good voices to start with, all well and good, but if we are not so blessed by nature we seem to make no effort to cure the ill. And it is surely a misfortune for any one to go through life with a disagreeable voice.

It does not seem to be a matter of general knowledge that a person with an unpleasant voice can improve it wonderfully under an instructor as well as by simple though self-imposed efforts.

If there be any man to whom a good voice is a necessity it is the orator. Well, the greatest of all orators, Demosthenes, was a stutterer. He cured himself by rolling pebbles under his tongue.

Let women, particularly, remember that no matter how plain and homely their physical features may be, no matter how slight the grace of their bodies, they can still make themselves infinitely charming by the possession of a pleasing voice.—Los Angeles Times.

"Doughboys" to the Rescue.

French newspapers are warm in their tributes to our soldiers. The American's appearance, their behavior, their ability to meet emergencies, have won great admiration. The Paris Figure tells the following story: A train for the country had been stalled by some strange condition of the locomotive. The passengers beat their feet on the floor and uttered outbursts from the windows. More time went by. The conductor walked vainly up and down the track. Nothing availed to start the engine.

Suddenly some one shouted: "Why don't you bring in the Americans?" The cry went up and down amid laughter when, sure enough, two young American soldiers appeared upon the scene from some corner of the train. They went to the engine, took possession of it, dumped all the old slag out of the firebox, broke up some coal into small bits, renewed the fire, hammered a little here and there, and presto! up started the train all at once, and proceeded without interruption to its journey's end.

Fish Meat vs. Beefsteak.

"Fish is not filling" said a business man the other day. "It's all right for a light luncheon, but somehow I never feel that it is really nutritious. For real food give me good old beef."

That man needs educating. He should know some of the simple facts stated by H. F. Taylor, a scientist of the bureau of fisheries, who tells us that pound for pound there is nearly if not quite as much protein in fish meat as in beefsteak. Oily fish, like shad, herring and eels, are especially nutritious, affording a large quantity of fat as well as protein. Fish roes contain more protein than beef, with some fat. Fish meat is quite as easily digested as other meat, and is a suitable form of protein for sedentary workers.

Practically every fish taken from pure water is fit to eat, the only objection being to some varieties being toughness and coarse texture, which can be remedied by proper cooking.

Seeking Location—

B. Verberg of Nebraska was in the city yesterday on his return from California. Mr. Verberg expressed himself as being very favorably impressed with this part of Oregon.

Albany Visitor—

Mrs. Bertha Morris of Lebanon was an Albany visitor today.
