DOROTHY PHILLIPS
The Incomparable

Dorothy Phillips, the wonderful—you'll never forget her as the young mother in the biggest drama of the ages, "THE HEART OF HUMANITY," the picture that will live forever. Pronounced by Press, Public and Critics "The Bernhardt of the screen." Dorothy Phillips will live long in your memory. You'll think about her. You'll talk about her. You'll never forget her.

Here is the biggest photo drama ever screened, bigger than any picture you've watched in your life, drawn from the sensational run on Broadway, New York, for seven straight weeks, and with sensational crowds wherever shown. And here are a few of thousands of expressions on this masterpiece of all human dramas.
"A picture which will be the most picture creation."—New York Times.
"One of the best pictures ever shown in the history of the screen."—New York Tribune.
"The Broadway Theatre was packed to overflowing for six consecutive nights, and a thrill and shiver of dramatic sensation."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.
"Of the utmost interest."—N. Y. World.
"Superior thrill to it with substance."—New York Herald.
"One of the most stirring dramas ever presented in New York. One of the most graphic pieces of acting ever seen in the screen."—N. Y. Evening World.
