being carried by war-maddened hordes over the once-beautiful valleys and hills of France and Belgium, is the dominating theme of "The Heart of Humanity," the eight-reel production by Allen Holubar in which Dorothy Phillips scores the most distinctive triumph of her screen career. This feature opens at the Globe today for a three days' run with a supporting cast of more than ordinary excellence. Nanette, ward of Father Michael, the parish priest, and wife of John Patricia, decides to go abroad as a Red Cross nurse. In a convent in Flanders that has been converted into a refuge for orphaned and homeless children, the little wife works night and day to allay their sufferings and bring cheer into their hearts.

While engaged in this work she is captured by the Germans and brought before Eric von Strang, a Prussian officer who had once been her husband's college friend and who had tried to make love to her in the little Canadian village. Strang's old desire for her returns and he tries to force his attentions upon her. There is a terrific fight.

She escapes to another room and plunges a knife into her bosom just as John, her husband, rushes into the room. She recovers, however, and weeks later, in a hospital, she is decorated by the French government for valorous service with the Red Cross and is persuaded to go home. Later there is a happy reunion in Canada—a reunion which crowns with complete happiness the work of Nanette.
