THE DEMANDS OF LABOR

It was a bold, clear statement that Samuel Gompers made in his opening address to the American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City, setting forth the present attitude of American labor.

"Men and women shed their blood and made great sacrifices during the war because they were fighting for principles and ideals," said Mr. Gompers. "Now that the war has been won, the workers—the bone and flesh of the nation—do not intend those principles and ideals shall be lost sight of."

"When the war began we realized that if militarism and autocracy should be victorious never again would there be any chance for labor to develop and protect itself and the rights of people who work. So we threw our lot upon the side of those who stood for the largest measure of freedom."

"Now the war has been won and the day of reconstruction and readjustment is at hand. A new conception of right has been reached and the world has gone through a great change. Hereafter the relations between nations and the relations between men, whether they be employers, skilled mechanics or ditch diggers, will be looked at in a different light. The workers of the world are determined to have a voice in settling reconstruction problems that affect them."

"Men and women have given their blood for principles and ideals not only for the period of the war but for the period of all time. In making sacrifices, it was not their intention that the principles for which they contended should be lost sight of when the war was won. They sacrificed themselves by letting their blood, and now they are determined that tyranny, whether it be in political or industrial life, shall be no more. The day for that has passed."

This is language of a sort that might have been resented a few years ago. But it is not resented now, because of the record of the American Federation of Labor during the war and since the signing of the armistice. The public knows that it comes from a great body of citizens of proved loyalty to American institutions, and that its demands on the whole are in keeping with the principles of the war and the spirit of the time.

It is not only the more or less disinterested public, assumed to exist between the 'laboring' and 'capitalistic' classes, which acknowledges the fairness of such demands. As Mr. Gompers remarks, "employers too have come to see the light of the new concept of right, and most of them are accepting the new order of things." As for the exceptions, the conservative extremists, the Bourbons of American capital, they are growing fewer all the time and they will have to yield to the inevitable, if organized labor continues true to the principles preached and practised by its present leaders.

The Salvation Army has been invited to work among the returned wounded soldiers at the Henry Ford hospital in Detroit.

ALVIN YORK, U. S. A., RETIRED

Attempts to exploit Alvin York, the "greatest hero of the war," who captured a whole German battalion single-handed, have failed.

He and his bride were to receive many honors at the hands of the people of his state, and then were to be taken in a sumptuous private car to the Rotarian meet in Chicago. But York refused to go, saying that all this hero worship which was to be heaped upon him "is only a snare of the devil, and unbecoming to an elder of the church." So he and his mountain girl are going back to their mountain cabin to live simply and cleanly, preaching and practising old-fashioned religion in their daily lives.

And who shall say they are not wise? What has the big, showy, noisy acclaiming world to offer Alvin York one-half so wholesome, so lasting and satisfactory as the life he will find in his native hills?

The nation had cause to be proud of this brave man who was sent to Europe to kill Germans and who therefore made killing Germans his business; but it has just as much cause to be proud of the sturdy independence and the deep religious feeling which make him turn aside from all its pomp and flattery to the simple things he knows make for happiness and peace.

So Big And Yet So Small!

Seen by itself, Swift & Company is one of the largest manufacturers and distributors of animal food products in the country.

Seen in relation to the total food business of the world, its size diminishes to small proportions.

We handle only about 22 per cent of the total output of the hundreds of packing plants under federal inspection, and only about 12 per cent of the total meat supply of the nation.

We handle only about 6 per cent of the total quantity of butter, eggs, and poultry sent to market in the United States.

Our tanneries handle less than 15 per cent of the hides made into leather in the United States.

Our soap factories make less than 10 per cent of the soap output of the nation.

This is done in keen and open competition with every concern handling these products, and at a profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

In the meat packing industry there is no one dominant concern handling a large proportion of the output.

Swift & Company, U. S. A.

Ash Swale Items
BROWNSVILLE, June 18.—Special.—A number of farmers in this section have formed a Four Thousand Dollar Corporation, and are building a warehouse and elevator at Browns-ville. They will be in the market for grain and hay this season. They expect to have everything in operation ready to handle this year's crop. Jake Ackerman is president of the company, Jas. Ferrell vice-president, and Mr. Dougherty secretary and treasurer.

The Cascade Contract company started their big plant at the Saddle Butte rock-quarry Monday morning. They expect to run steady during the summer but have not a full crew yet and are looking for more men.

Clev. Harrison sold his 75 Model Overland last week and purchased a Chevrolet car. The Chevrolet seems to be the most popular car in this section. Mr. Harrison purchased the car from the Devolin Garage. They have sold about 20 Chevrolets during the past month and is doing a big business here.

Hon. M. A. Miller Visits—
Hon. M. A. Miller, former sage of Lebanon, now collector of customs at Portland, was an Albany visitor this morning on his way to Portland from Lebanon where he has been for a few days' much-needed rest. Mr. Miller possesses an optimistic view of the future of Oregon in all general lines and especially on the good roads question.

From Lebanon—
Lee Bilyeu, a well known citizen of Lebanon, changed cars at the S. P. depot this morning on his way to Portland on a business trip.

"Key Money."
In many districts of England, and particularly in Yorkshire, where the death of houses is acute, the practice of paying "key money" is growing. So keen are prospective tenants to get into a house directly it is vacant that as much as $50 to $100 is offered to the occupier for the key, this transaction generally carrying with it the understanding that the landlord will accept the succeeding tenant.

On Business Trip—
LeRoy Wood of the Albany Iron foundry went to Salem this morning on a business trip.

Went to Salem—
W. R. Scott of the Linn and Benton cannery association made a business trip to Salem today. Mr. Scott is growing stronger as the days go by in the faith and fact that Albany will soon have one of the leading canneries in the Willamette Valley.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford One Ton Truck is one of the sure business utilities, and likewise just as big a necessity on the farm. Farming is surely a business proposition wherein success depends upon economical methods with up-to-date machinery. The Ford Truck will prove a great economy on the farm. The marvel is "how the farmer has got along without it all these years." It is a servant that serves, always ready and always economical. Price $550, without body, f. o. b. Detroit.
