Left for Wyoming—

Mrs. W. R. McMurray (nee Gertrude Taylor) and son left Saturday for Cheyenne, Wyo., where her husband, Lieut. McMurray, is stationed with the U. S. cavalry. He was unable to secure his discharge from the army as soon as he expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Park Stalnaker and baby are in the city at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holbert. They will spend their vacation here.

Leave for Vacation—

Mr. and Mrs. Don McGlashan and Mrs. W. P. Morris left today for Mr. McGlashan's mine south of Quartzville for a two weeks' outing.

Has Fine Peaches—

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Winnifred, former Linn county residents who now own a fine 45-acre peach orchard in Mission Bottom, nine miles north of Salem, are visitors in the city. They visited with Mrs. Winnifred's brother, L. A. Bishop, on the Tangent road, and Mrs. Mary Palmer and Mrs. Lyde B. Stewart, in this city. Mr. Winnifred states that he will have 10,000 boxes of peaches of fine quality this year, but is having trouble in finding help to harvest them. There is two months work for a good man and his family, whom Mr. Winnifred would welcome with open arms.

BONDS MAY BE CHANGED BEGINNING JULY 15—

The banks have been notified that beginning July 15 that Victory Liberty Loan bonds drawing 3 and 3-4 per cent can be converted into bonds drawing 4 and 3-4 per cent and that the 4 and 3-4 per cent bonds may be converted into bonds drawing a lower rate with special privileges.

MARY HAD NOT FORGOTTEN

Movie Actress Tells Why She Long Has Had Grudge Against Robert Hilliard.

Robert Hilliard, actor, and best-dressed man in New York theatrical circles, was introduced to Mary Pickford recently. As they shook hands he smiled and said:

"My dear Miss Pickford, I have wanted to meet you for a long time. This is a pleasure, I assure you."

"Thank you, Mr. Hilliard," replied the movie actress, "but I must say your memory for faces isn't very good."

"Why?" he asked.

"Some twenty years ago, when you were playing in 'The Littlest Girl' in Toronto, you needed a child to be the girl. My mother offered my services. I was little Gladys Smith then. You looked me over and told me to go home and wash my hands."

"No, no," replied the horrified Hilliard. "I couldn't have said that."

"But you did," persisted Miss Pickford; "but I told you my hands weren't dirty—they were chapped. You finally gave me the job, but I took a dislike to you just the same."

"You did! Why?"

"Because," concluded Miss Pickford, "you made me go home and wash my hands, anyway, and I detested soap and water in those days."

"Well, I declare!" said Mr. Hilliard, as he arranged his boutonniere.—Rehoboth Herald.

COWBOY NOT YET EXTINGUISHED

May Be Fewer Than Some Years Ago, but This Traveler Tells of Meeting One.

"You mean to say," I began, "that there are still real cowboys? But as smiles were beginning to pass about the platform I desired, realization beginning to dawn why the barber said that the men we had seen driving cattle back in Kansas would be pleased to have been called cow-punchers."

The trip at once began to assume a new interest, and when the mine barber came back on the platform I eyed him with something of that reserve with which one contemplates a delectable man. But nothing could penetrate his drawling sang-froid.

At a tank station farther along there was opportunity to stretch our legs; opportunity, also, to observe at close range a bronzed, dark-haired cow-puncher who had paused on his Mustang to observe the train. The barber approached him confidently.

"Neighbor," he said, "I bought a gun in K. C. Mizoo. What do you think of it?"

The puncher took the wicked 44, balanced it in the palm of his hand, twirled it around on his forefinger, and then brought it to bear upon a tin can lying in the road about 20 feet away. Bang! The can leaped into the air. Bang! It rolled five feet farther along. Bang! Again it flew into the air and rolled. Bang! It rolled again. Bang! The can disappeared in the dust.

"It's a good gun," said the puncher, handing it back, "only it shoots a little high."

A little high! Rather a nice criticism, I thought. The barber snapped out the cylinder, reloaded the weapon and passed it into the back-ground. My impression was that he was avoiding some questions on my part relative to Kansas City had been; but I may have been wrong.

We began to fly through the level ground, perspectives on all sides dotted with peaks upon which clouds rested. Suddenly along the trail appeared an altogether amazing, unlooked-for, almost unbelievable spectacle—two Indians jogging along on horseback wearing moccasins, wide black trousers, red or pink shirts, their black hair secured by scarlet bands about their foreheads.—Scribner's Magazine.

Americanism in the Making.

Almost anything you can think of, it is said, can be seen somewhere in that long, erratic historic street that strays upward from the point of Manhattan Island, cutting across the streets and avenues of the world's largest city at its own sweet will. Something once seen there by Mr. J. B. Kerfoot, the author of Broadway, indicates that the enterprise, the daring and adaptability to new conditions that were characteristic of the early settlers in America are still characteristic of the people who are crossing the Atlantic to our shores in the twentieth century.

One day, says Mr. Kerfoot, I saw an Italian peasant woman, fresh landed from the steerage and dressed in all the fete-day regalia of her native province, chase a Broadway car for half a block in front of the post office. She caught up with it from behind when it stopped at Park place, and falling to notice the entranceway, grasped the broke handle of the rear platform, threw a sturdy, red-stockinged leg over the rail, and swung herself aboard with the satisfied air of having successfully surmounted one of the early difficulties of the new country.

Broadway smiled, collected her fare, and went on about its business.—Youth's Companion.

EXPLOSIVE REGULATION ABOLISHED—

County clerk R. M. Russell mailed to day to the Bureau of Mines Washington D. C. all documents pertaining to the granting of licenses to use explosives. The abolishing of the need of a license to purchaser or transportation companies to transfer any type of explosive was abolished by the government to take effect June 30. The government had a representative in each of the leading centers of the country during the war period. Mr. Russell reports that he issued about 200 licenses during the war period.

BROWNSVILLE HIT

house and next that of A. A. Tussing, which was the last to burn.

On the opposite side of the street in the path of the fire the residence of Mrs. McCloud, a widow woman, was burned, and she lost her entire fortune and all of her belongings. She had $150 in currency in the house, but Mrs. McCloud, who was working in the creamery, could not reach her home in time to save it.

The tabernacle, a structure erected for union church meetings, burned with a loss of about $500. The fine home of the Brownsville Rod & Gun club, their plans, trophies and furnishings, was wiped out with a loss of about $2,000. Two houses owned by Mrs. Julia Ernestberger, who lives in Washington, one the home of Mrs. Alice Moore, were consumed. The Wm. McLeod estate, occupied by Seth H. Baker, proprietor of the Brownsville Flour Mills, at Averill street and Kirk Avenue, and the Brownsville Tannery and a barn owned by the McLeod estate, were burned. D. H. Murphy's home on Kirk Ave., owned by M. B. Miller, of Harrisburg, was taken, as was that of Mrs. Robert Robe, whose late husband was a classmate of James G. Blaine.

Only One Auto Burns
On Main street a residence owned by the Brownsville Creamery Co. and the house occupied by Drs. E. W. Howard and R. M. Waltz completed the circle. The only automobile known lost was that of Dr. Howard. The car was run out of an old barn, but the flames overtook it where it was left standing.

On Spaulding Avenue the flames leaped across the street and ignited the undertaking parlors of Wright & Poole, F. H. Weber's harness shop, P. Totzauer's shoe shop, W. B. Blanchard's building and the Odd Fellows' building. The flames were controlled along this street, but the buildings were badly scorched, burned in some places, and much plate glass was broken by the heat.

Cities Send Firemen

The Corvallis, Lebanon and Albany fire departments were called on, but none arrived in time to do a great deal of good, although it is possible that some of the buildings on the south side of Main street might have burned had not water been played on them. Some caught fire several times.

The fact that the wind kept steady from the north confined the flames to one area, but a little shift might have resulted in the fire spreading to South Brownsville and off to the west.

Insurance Is Light

In all 17 residences were burned, the value of which would average $1,000 each and their contents approximately $10,000; 15 business houses valued at about $50,000; the gun club, $2,000, and the tabernacle, $500. The stocks are difficult to estimate, but it is not thought that the total loss will exceed $75,000 on everything.

Several people lost Liberty Bonds and War Savings stamps. Most of the stores and offices, where stocks were not too badly damaged, have found temporary quarters and are attending to business until proper accommodations can be provided. Very little insurance was carried.
