POOR WAY TO WOO SLEEP

Man Who Experimented Pronounced Insomnia "Cure" to Be at Least of Doubtful Value.

A new cure for insomnia, we read, is to "list the first names of all your friends and acquaintances, taking each letter of the alphabet in order."

Of course this is only a variant of the old device of counting imaginary sheep jumping over a wall. Personally we never found that to work at all. We counted between 11,000 and 12,000 of these alleged soporific sheep one night, and then the alarm clock went off and it was time to get up, which we did with a groan, a headache and a pair of astigmatic eyes.

Making an alphabetical catalogue of your friends' first names is an even more stimulating and nerve-exciting process. We would be willing to wager that no normal persons could get further than the N's before being interrupted by the first call for breakfast. It is doubtful, at least, if the night contains enough time to go through with the whole list from Alfred to Zorilla. We should say that this might be the surest way to banish sleep altogether.

The best way to woo slumber, we have been told, is to go into the silence, relax all muscles and nerves, and then in a mental way, pull all the edges of the mind into a dead mental center and fold them in. It is hard to say just how this is done, but it sounds plausible. Frequently, of course, there are some difficulties merely in going into a silence. Somewhere on the premises, perhaps in an adjacent apartment, there may be someone who has gone to sleep without going into the silence. This interferes materially with the working of all anti-insomnia devices. If there is no neighboring obstacle of this sort it is a much easier matter.

And yet, even after the silence is arranged, the mind is apt to go on providing its own disturbance. Arithmetical and alphabetical diversions only accentuate the tumult. The only thing to do is to regard the very center of the mind as a hypothetical hole, or vacuum, contract the mind until it is all pulled into this hole, and then pull the hole in after it. And there you are. Of course if there is a certain degree of reality in this imagined condition, one does not have to exercise the hypothesis, and that makes it so much easier.—F. H. Young in Providence Journal.

Explained.

She was weeping bitter tears into her afternoon tea. "Oh, my dear!" she said to her only friend, "I don't know what I shall do. Ted and I have only been married six months, yet he spends every evening at his club."

"Well, don't worry, darling," said the other. "Percy's just the same. But I shall never scold him again for spending so much time at his club."

"Why not?"
"Well, last night a burglar got into the house and my husband knocked him senseless with a poker. I've heard several men speak of him as a poker expert. He has evidently been practicing at the club for just such an emergency."—Exchange.

Rescue Cage.

Less thrilling than being rescued and carried down on a swaying ladder, but much more practical, is a new rescue cage. When the fire ladder is thrown against a burning building it carries with it a wire cable attached to a steel cage. Like an elevator with a shaft the cage hangs from its pulley at the top of the ladder, within easy reach of the windows. It is lowered by turning the cable drum on the fire truck below, and will carry four passengers safely.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Bright Rupert.

The lesson was on the rabbit. "The rabbit has long ears, fur on its body, and a tail, nothing to speak of, though," the master informed the class.

The next day he wanted to see what they knew about it.

"Now, then, Rupert," he barked to a particularly bright youth, "tell me something about the rabbit."

"The rabbit has a tail," said Rupert, eyeing his silent fellows triumphantly, "but it mustn't talk about it."

Just So.

She was teaching the word "element" to a sixth grade. She had told them its meaning—the substances of which a thing is composed—and then had illustrated her definition by saying that the elements of the earth were water and soil.

Then she asked them to write sentences containing the word. And this is the one Henry wrote:

"Water is one of the elements of milk."

progressive dairymen declare in favor of the Holsteins.

H. C. Pyle is one of our farmers who has done much for our community. He has been a worker for good roads, good schools, better cooperative conditions for the farmer. He now has a vision of our future in which he sees the possibilities of great oil developments in our country. He has much evidence for his belief and our people so far as they are able are lending a hand. It is hoped that this prospect may blossom into a reality.

Our young people are showing their confidence in the future of our section by purchasing large tracts of land. Among recent buyers are Elmer and Clarence Powell, Roy and Buell Hardin, Wayne Conser, Clyde Pomeroy and John Bothner.

The health of our community is fair. There are a few cases of small-pox, but all are improving.

The Baptists Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Cornelius Cox Thursday afternoon, July 24th. The work for the afternoon will be wool-picking. A full attendance is desired.
J. B. Sperry of Brownsville is the guest of his cousin, W. C. Skelton. Mr. Sperry, who is 84 years old, was at one time a member of the Oregon legislature. He served his country in the Indian wars and supported the late war financially. He is a lifelong democrat. He has done much for the development of the livestock industry, principally in the sheep division.

Looking for Location—

Mr. and Mrs. A. Pollack and family arrived last evening from Nezperce, Idaho, and are visiting at the home of J. W. Huntley on West 7th street for the present. They expect to rent a house or rooms here for awhile and look for a permanent location.

Mr. Pollack is a brother-in-law of Mr. Huntley.

Going to Cascadia—

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Templeton and two children will leave tomorrow for Cascadia for a two weeks' vacation. Mr. Templeton expects to pass the time fishing.
