That Bathing Suit

This is the time of year when argument rages hotly at every bathing beach as to what is modest and proper attire for swimmers. Women swimmers more especially, since men bathing suits are of a standard hilousness which receives and merits little attention.

No bathing suit can be any more modest than the conduct of its wearer. Annette Kellerman, an accomplished swimmer and beautiful woman, chose for her swimming garb a close-fitting, one-piece garment which did not hinder her progress in the water any more than a fish's scales under the fish. Yet she was not accused of immodesty. The reason is that she dressed appropriately for the thing she was going to do, and then she did the thing, for which she was dressed. When she had finished swimming and diving, she disappeared and clothed herself in suitable street attire, or she sat on the beach and made no effort to attract the attention of the beach flirt or loafer.

Their heavy, cumbersome garment explain why most women never learn to swim. While the Annett Kellerman suits may be considered extreme by the average woman, the one who wishes to learn easily and enjoy swimming to the utmost will at least choose a suit of straight and simple lines, with skirt both scant and short. Then, if she will devote her attention to her sport, the public will devote little attention to her. As for the common and indecent of both sexes who too frequently infect the public beach, they should be sent away or put under arrest, just as would equally objectionable characters on public streets.

A Way To Get Rich

There is said to be a man in Chicago whom the cost of living affects very little. He is worth $3000,000, and has managed to add to it right along. Most people's expenses grow with their wealth, but his decrease. He has a system for getting rich and staying rich that is very simple, and will surely work if anybody wants to apply it.

He started many years ago as a laborer. He quit smoking and drinking, not because he objected to them morally, but because they cost money that was all right. Then he stopped paying car fare and railroad fare for the same reason. He never went anywhere that he couldn't walk. He kept away from the theatre and other places of entertainment. He never gave any money to the church or to any form of charity. He drove his wife and three children from home because it cost money to support them.

He went to bed always as sundown to save light and heat. He never bought any good clothes. He stopped paying laundry bills. He raised much of his own food, and cooked it himself. He lived on $50 to $100 a year, and put all the rest of his income into real estate. All his wealth now is in land and houses. He himself in a shack. Of course he has no newspapers or magazines or books or music or comfortable furniture.

There you are! Anybody can get rich that way, if he will only set his mind to it, and keep at it everlastingly. It's a sure recipe for success if anybody is interested in that kind of success.

COWS GOING ABROAD

Another American army is being prepared for early transportation overseas. It is an army of milk cows wanted to replace hundreds of thousands of cows killed during the war. France wants 150,000 American cows. There are Belgian orders for 100,000 more. Counting others scattered orders about 500,000 are wanted as early as possible.

The shortage of milk in the war-ravaged countries has been one of the great causes of suffering among the children. When American herds get on the job in their new homes there will be a general improvement in child health and less relief work needed for pitiful, starving youngsters. Important part in the gigantic task of health reconstruction in Europe.

Now, as ever, the German people seem unable to recognize in a German.

Brownsville News Notes

BROWNSVILLE, July 29.—Special.
—In looking over the burnt district of Brownsville with its black and ruined waste one thinks and hopes to see it, Phoenix-like, come up out of the ashes. Ed Holloway will rebuild what was known as the Tripp & Pyrtle block; W. B. Blanchard will rebuild with good and substantial buildings; Sterling also will put up a fireproof building.

Lightning set a fire out at the Oxford place and placed other pranks not down on the Ellboard.

Several people here think of taking advantage of the low rates East and will visit their people. Among the number are R. T. Kumlker and wife, Mrs. J. W. Mallow; also J. F. Venner who will attend the Grand Encampment.

The new sawery is going up, the concrete moga being put in place at the rate of some 200 per day.

Late sown oats in this vicinity will be a poor crop while the early will be
