"Chin Chin" Is Picturesque

Here are the four Leading Ladies in "Chin Chin" at the Globe tonight. We'll say they show Class as well as Palchitude in abundance.

The theatrical treat of the year will be presented at the Globe Theatre this evening at 8:15 when Walter Willis and Roy Bender will be seen in that gorgeous Oriental extravaganza, "Chin Chin." Managers Hill and Hudson of the Globe Theatre are maintaining a policy of giving their patrons at least one big road show a month, besides the usual run of high class pictures, and consider themselves fortunate in bringing such a large and excellent company here as "Chin Chin."

"Chin Chin" is a play that will be to the liking of Albany theatregoers. It is snappy, contains many funny situations, is not at all deep and has plenty of pretty girls and catchy songs. The plot, if it can be called a plot, is based upon Alladin and his lamp, the magician, Abanazar, who tries to get the lamp and incidentally carries off Alladin's intended bride, the slaves of the lamp who do many strange things in their quest of the lamp, Alladin's stepmother, the widow Twankey and her maid, Fan Tan, who is apparently made of India rubber. The patra of the slaves of the lamp, carried by Willis and Bender, the chief funmakers, call for acrobatic feats, comic songs, dancing and difficult acting. Their big song hit is "Go Gar Sig Gong-Jue" which, in plain English, means "The High Cost of Living." Violet Tree as the maid is attractive and sings and dances most pleasingly.

The play is elaborately set, showing a toy shop, Alladin's cave, a tea shop, and even a circus, there being seven scenes in all. There are many pretty scenes as well as comic ones. "Good-bye Girls, I'm Through," is sung in the first act and the strain runs through the entire play. Miss Betty Orme sings some pleasing numbers. There are many specialties in the show, including Tom Brown and his famous clown band. The Brown brothers saxophone records are in great demand by phonograph owners and a chance to see them in person will be welcomed. "Chin Chin" is the real treat of the season.

UNDER-INFLATION HARD ON TIRES

Summer Not So Hard on Tires as Some People Think

You cannot give a tire too much air. But you can give it too little, and under-inflated tires have caused more tire expense, more annoyance, more arguments over tire failures than all the other injuries to automobile tires. Some valuable hints concerning tire inflation are advanced by the Diamond Rubber Company that, if heeded, will mean a substantial saving to tire users.

A motorist shouldn't think of running his car on tires with too little air in them any more than he would consider running his engine without oil.

The two main reasons for this common practice, neither of which is excusable, are: first, the car owner may be neglectful and allow his vigilance on tire inflation to relax. Second, he may like the easy riding of low pressures and indulge in the practice as a luxury. In either case tires are being destroyed prematurely and the owner will get nothing near the mileage built into the tire by the maker.

Contrary to common belief hot weather effect on tires—the rising pressure of contained air caused by summer heat—is not appreciable and consequently is not at all dangerous. The Diamond company recommends the religious use of the following inflation table of minimum pressures on cord and fabric tires if users wish to get the full value from tires. The pressure for various sizes in relation to the load is given:

Cord Tires
Size	Inflation	Load
3 in.	45 lbs.	375 lbs.
3 1/2 in.	45 lbs.	570 lbs.
4 in.	60 lbs.	815 lbs.
5 in.	75 lbs.	1300 lbs.
5 1/2 in.	80 lbs.	1700 lbs.
Fabric Tires
Size	Inflation	Load
3 in.	45 lbs.	375 lbs.
3 1/2 in.	55 lbs.	570 lbs.
4 in.	65 lbs.	815 lbs.
4 1/2 in.	75 lbs.	1100 lbs.
5 in.	80 lbs.	1300 lbs.
5 1/2 in.	85 lbs.	1700 lbs.
