A League To Right Wrongs It is rather confidently expected at Washington that Japan will cut the Gordian knot of the Shantung controversy by making an explicit statement of her honorable intentions with regard to the peninsula and set a definite date for returning it to China. Such action would be wise and timely. It would conciliate American opinion and promote good feeling between the United States and Japan. It would help greatly in smoothing the way toward ratification of the peace treaty and restoring order and confidence throughout the world. If Japan, however, declines to adopt this sensible, honorable procedure, what is to be done about Shantung to upset the whole plan for permanent, peaceful world organization, or shall world organization be utilizing? Shall the Shantung be allowed to straighten out the Shantung situation? A level-headed observer reminds the public that if China has been wronged in any way by Japan, or Japan fails to keep its pledges to the League of Nations is the only instrument through which China can hope to obtain redress and justice."

Representative Dyer of Missouri has introduced a bill in congress providing that an automobile thief shall be punished by a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment from one to ten years, or both. Pretty severe. Still, it isn't long since they hanged men in Missouri for stealing horses, and even a fliver is worth as much as a horse.

The Luxurious Sailor A queer situation has arisen in the return of the Dutch steamships. Nearly 50 ships, it will be remembered, which had been idle in American harbors, were chartered last year by the United States government for cargo use in connection with the war service.

With the emergency past, they are now being transferred to their owners. Before availing itself of those ships the United States remodeled their interiors, providing better quarters for officers and crews, with steam heat, baths, refrigerators and other improvements required by the American shipping regulations.

These additions, it was supposed, added materially to the value of the vessels. The commissioners, however, decided to be generous. So they informed the Dutch government that they would leave all this apparatus in the ships as a gift to the owners. The reply was an order to remove all these modern comforts in compliance with the charter terms which provided that ships should be return-

Passing of the Pioneers

In Memory of the late Eli Rodgers By Fred E. Harrison Now another Pioneer is taken, And we miss his face each day. But we know that he is resting Where no pain will find its way. For over eighty years he'd been among us, And it filled our hearts with pain When he'd speak of his departure. For he knew he'd not remain.

Eli Rodgers was another Of those hardy Pioneers. Now we reap their fruits of labor From their many active years.

How fast the Pioneers are passing. Now but just a few are here; And their ranks are growing thinner With each swiftly-passing year.

When we think of all their hardships, As they blazed the Western Trail, How they conquered trials and dangers,— It is to us a thrilling tale.

When the Pioneers' work is finished, And they all are laid to rest, Then we'll know what they have giv'n us. When they blazed the trail 'out West.

ed in the same condition in which they had been taken. The Dutch owners objected to the improvements on the ground that if one ship had them the crews of other Dutch ships would demand them.

There could hardly be any more instructive commentary on the superiority of the treatment now given American sailors over those of other nations. Only the American sailor is able to go to sea in a comfortable, steam-heated flat, with liberal pay and nearly all the luxuries of life ashore.

A bright bartender has adapted himself to the new era by changing the sign over his old place of business to read, "Near-Saloon."

Anyway, Henry Ford did get that anti-preparedness stuff out of his system when he went to the preparedness game for all he was worth.

On the whole, there seems to be about as much criticism of the peace treaty as there was of the constitution of the United States when it was up for re-election. Max Harden wants the Kaiser's trial delayed until the war's wounds have healed. By that time there wouldn't be any Kaiser left to try.

Henry Ford, as a witness in his libel suit, defined a 'mobile' army as a large army. Surely he wouldn't think of an automobile as a large auto.

Congress might accept a mandatory for the colored race in Washington and Chicago.

Daylight-saving is in the twilight stage.
