AUSTRALIANS AND YANKS BROTHERS

Fighting Anzacs Hold Americans In High Esteem

London, July 4—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Austrian and American soldiers are "full blood brothers" in the opinion of Lieutenant-General Sir John Monash Commander-in-Chief of the Australian forces in the war, because the Americans were never placed in any position, nor called upon to perform any duty, when, as the General expressed it, in an Independence Day speech here tonight, they did not "deliver the goods."

General Monash said he first reached this conclusion in the early dawn of the Fourth of July, 1918, when for the first time, Australian troops fighting side by side with the Americans in the Somme Sector won the battle of Hamel and gave to the allied arms the first success they had achieved since the Germans began their memorable advance on March 21.

"This battle was the turning point of the war," said General Monash. "It was a brilliant and unqualified success, and its effect upon the morale, both of the enemy and of our own men, was electric and startling. It became the model of all subsequent achievements in France, and it paved the way for the great counter offensive in August."

The American troops engaged, the General said, were 1,000 men from the 33d division, commanded by General John Bell. The 33d division was then undergoing training. General Monash said he had asked and obtained

VANITY FAIR glove silk bloomers, correctly fashioned, are a comfy garment that you'll delight in wearing. $2.75

HERE'S the new and already very famous Glove Silk "Plus Four Inch Vest." You don't realize how much four inches can be until you have them on the end of a Vanity Fair Silk Under-vest. There's all the difference in the world between a short uncomfortable vest that maliciously rides up under your corset, and the Vanity Fair, which gives you an unbroken, sleek line from corset-end to stocking-top. 'No garter' can touch you! It comes in a flesh-colored glove silk. $2.95 permission to employ 1000 of the Americans in the battle of Hamel, but on the eve of the battle the permission was withdrawn.

"I passed a strenuous and exciting period of two hours," continued General Monash. "So far as I could learn the order originated in some misunderstanding at American General Headquarters as to the state of preparedness for battle of this division."

"I could not afford to have my battle plans ruined at the last moment by the withdrawal of a large fraction of my assaulting infantry, so I went to my army commander and delivered an ultimatum. If the Americans were not allowed to remain in the order of battle, then the battle in the morning would be off. Unless a decision was given by six o'clock that night the battle would go on with the Americans in it as planned. We man aged to intercept the Commander-in-Chief and he gave the order, 'Carry on.'"

"Those 1,000 Americans covered themselves with glory, and I can pay them no greater compliment than by saying that from that day on our Australian veterans took them to their hearts as fullblood brothers." General Monash declared that the 131st American Regiment of the 33d Division, in company with the 13th Australian Brigade, "fought a most gallant and successful series of actions which resulted in the capture of Chipilly Spur" when the great counter offensive was launched by Australians and Canadians in the Somme sector on August 8, 1918. "This," he said, "made secure my left flank thereby enabling me to get astride of the Valley of the Somme and hunt the enemy clean out of it for twenty miles."

General Monash had under his command in the closing days of the war the whole second American Army Corps, more than 60,000 men of the 27th and 30th American divisions. This army, he said, overthrew the Hindenberg defense system at its "most strongly defended point." The share of the American divisions in these operations was characterized by General Monash as "probably the greatest single American feat of arms achieved in the whole war." The operations were completed on October 6, he said, and it was on that night that the "Germans threw up the sponge and declared their willingness to make peace on our own terms."

"I have been asked over and over again to express my opinion of the American troops," Gen. Monash continued. "I am not going to be so foolish as to attempt to do so here and now. I am only going to say in your own expressive vernacular that at all times and in every place where I have used them, the American troops 'delivered the goods.'"

"You may well believe that this close association in war of such large bodies of Australians and Americans has erected a very real and lasting friendship between our two democracies. The foundations of that friendship had already been laid many years before by the visit of the American battle fleet to Australia.

"I can assure you that Australia attaches much importance to securing and maintaining the friendship of America. We look upon the United States as our big brother in the Pacific, and if any one of the problems of the Pacific which are going to arise in the future he will know what I mean by that observation."

The Post-War Maxwell is the Surprise Car of the Year

ITS a mental stimulation to look over this post-war Maxwell and see one surprise after another in fine engineering.

You get the accumulation of war years in rare automobile ideas.

There's the new Lemoine type front axle, which gives a new delight at the wheel in its easy, centering effect in steering.

Then there's the heavy, new rear axle with the extra large, indestructible four pinion differential. And two universal joints of the oilless disc type. They require no attention during the life of the car.

Brakes! The emergency is now found on the transmission, as on so many foreign cars. The service brake is the larger toggle type, and is equipped with equalizers, which prevent the tendency to skid.

In the rear now is slung the gas tank, large and with vacuum feed. No more gas fumes or gas leakage up in front.

Also equipped with Hot Spot and Ram's Horn.

There are many more rare treats in store for you, but remember this Post-War model is the continuation of the original Maxwell chassis as laid down 5 years ago.

To date more than 300,000 have been built. The public has paid $200,000,000 for previous Maxwells. This Post-War Maxwell is a greater car.

Be among the early ones to get this prized car.
