MILITARISM STILL RAMPANT

"I consider it absolutely right, from the standpoint of France and England that they should wish to get the greatest possible advantage from having won the war."

With this surprising statement Gen. von Bernhardi, well known German military writer, begins an article in the New York World. He adds: "France and England are acting quite naturally and properly in trying to do us as much harm as possible."

At first reading these words may seem surprisingly liberal and generous, considering their source. But a thoughtful re-reading disposes of any such interpretation, and shows the serpent coiled between the lines—German militarism—attempts to justify itself by the clever but transparent device of representing Germany's foes as animated by the same spirit as Germany.

According to this view, the allied peace terms are intolerably oppressive. But they are "according to Hoyle," as it were. Any conqueror, Bernhardi and his kind suggest, might impose such terms, in order to cripple the beaten enemy and keep him beaten. Germany would have done it. France and England and the United States insofar as it approves the peace settlement, are thus no better than Germany.

So Germany stands merely a nation that has made a brave effort and, somehow or other, his lost the game, without thereby necessarily incurring any dishonor or any duty to make reparation beyond what is exacted from her by force. And always there is in the background of such discussions, as there is very plainly in this one of Bernhardi's, that Germany's time will come again, and in the next war there may be a different result.

The same old ring of sword-rattlers, the same old robber band, the same old medieval spirit for a supposedly modern and enlightened nation against more highly civilized tribes. Not a hint of responsibility to the rest of mankind, and of deference to the eternal law established by the great Sovereign of all mankind.

AMERICAN BO-PEEPS

There are a number of American Bo-Peeps living in poverty in Europe who have asked for permission to return to this country and bring their sheep.

They are the wealthy American women who were married to enemy aliens, and whose holdings in this country have been temporarily confiscated during the war.

If the husbands will come with their wives, forego their foreign citizenship and titles and become American citizens, it is quite possible that the property will be restored. Other wise some other disposition of it will be made. It is no part of Uncle Sam's intention to finance any enemy uprising.

It may be a little humiliating to a proud German or Austrian sheep to come to this country and become a plain mister, leaving his titled tail behind him, but good American dollars are worth considering. Crown and titles are a little value in these days.

The House of Representatives has to remain in session to consider the H. C. L. We should worry. Nobody else in country gets a vacation from considering it—why should Congress?

A New York saloonkeeper was fined $1,000, and sentenced to six months imprisonment, for selling one drink of whisky. For once the man who sells it, instead of the man who drinks it, will suffer from "R. E."

Shoe men say that shoes will be $20 a pair this fall. There will also be shoes for $10 and $5 a pair. If nobody buys the $20 ones, the price of all three grades will rapidly come to normal.

Buy the grade of goods which keeps your living within your income, and then pay your bills. Charity may begin at home, but your dealer's charity does not begin in your home.

Austria has presented a lot of counter proposals to the allied peace mission in Paris. And now the peace mission will give an imitation of a lot of counter jumpers.

Japan Feels H. C. L. TOKIO, July 15.—A. P. Correspondence.—The prohibition movement in the U. S. has been followed here by the launching of a project to national manufacture of sake, Japan's national alcoholic drink distilled from rice. The end of the war has brought no check to the steady increase in the price of necessities and the soaring cost of rice, which is the staple food of the Japanese, is becoming a grave problem. Last year the high price of rice led to serious riots.
