Professor and Motorman

Posters displayed in the Harvard campus bear the figures of a professor and a motorman, with this legend: "A motorman gets 60 cents an hour a professor 18. Which is worth more, gentlemen, minding the train or training the mind?"

It sums up rather neatly the present discrepancy between the pay of educators and the pay of those engaged in occupations which can hardly be called intellectual.

It is merely a picturesque version of a situation now becoming familiar everywhere, in which muscular work is better paid than mental work.

It might not do to declare, off-hand that this is altogether wrong. It may be that muscle deserves as much as brain for a day's work, as Edward Bellamy maintained or even that muscle deserves more than brain, as the Bolsheviks now maintain.

Maybe thought is not worth more than manual labor, unless it be the thought of the foreman who bosses the labor. Maybe, too, the personal, cultural satisfactions of the man of trained mind are so much a reward in themselves that such an individual deserves to be penalized, so to speak, by being paid less than the laborer.

But such reasoning, like the situation on which it is based, turns the old standards topsy-turvy.

Sergeant York, American

Sergeant York, the Tennessee mountaineer who distinguished himself by capturing a whole German machine gun battalion single-handed, has decided to capitalize the fame which to him is a result. He proposes to devote his life to furthering education among the young men and women who live in the rural and mountainous districts of his state.

York University is to be established for the purpose, and to finance it the Sergeant will make a tour of the leading cities of the United States delivering a lecture upon his life and his war experiences.

An attempt was made when York first returned to this country to get him before the public. He was offered entertainment and adulation without reserve. All of this he declined, saying that he preferred to dwell and work among his own people. The reversal of his decision springs from no self-seeking motive. He gives the thing that he has, his fame and popularity, for the betterment of his neighbors, as simply as he gave his courage and marksmanship to his country.

It has been said that the purest American strain is to be found among the mountain whites. The story of Alvin York would seem to indicate that the purest Americanism is to be found there also.

Fifteen cents a week for self-improvement has been allowed by the board determining the minimum wage for Massachusetts girls. Probably the committee looked the girls over, decided they could easily be improved upon.

Or was it, perhaps, their decision that the girls needed very little improving?

Better bring Hoover home and put him on the food job.

Here from Kansas.—Mrs Barr and granddaughter, Miss Carrie Helt, of Winfield Kansas, are visiting at the home of Mr and Mrs D. C. McClure.

To Enter College.—C. H. Raymond, of Marshfield, was in the city last week looking over Albany college, which he plans on entering when the fall term opens.

He has sold his grocery business and will study the ministry, choosing Albany College from a large number of schools. He will bring his family with him.

Like Mountain Roads.—Whit Crawford is still taking about the fine mountain roads found in Lane County after a trip which he and Mrs Crawford enjoyed last week.

With Mr and Mrs E. U. Lee of Eugene they visited Belknap Springs, then to Foley Springs, stopping at both places and making the 130 mile trip in one day. Fine crushed rock is used on the mountain roads, which makes them like paved highways.

Mat Craft Out.—Friends of M. B. Craft were pleased to see him out on the street yesterday after his illness of several weeks at his home. His condition is improving rapidly.

American Legion To Form More Posts

A post of The American Legion, the national organization of ex-service men, in every county in the State of Oregon by August 29, is the goal which has been set by State Secretary Dow V. Walker of Portland in an announcement to the press today.

This means that Oregon, with more than 30,000 prospective members of The American Legion, will be well organized by the state convention which is planned for September. Already applications for charters have been forwarded to national headquarters at New York from 16 local posts and as many more will be sent from state headquarters again shortly.
