The Duty To Get Rich
Most people are apt to think of "getting rich" as a kind of desirable impossibility. They think of "rich people" as lucky accidents in the scheme of life. They themselves want a little more than they have, and they keep hoping to get a cause or a little increased business or make a good investment; but that is as far as they go, even in their dreams.

But right now it is the duty of every American to get rich.
Barrage a few accidents due to inheritance, wealth is acquired in only one way. That is by the production of something which the mass of the people need. The famous oil fortune, for instance, in just as may have been some of its methods, was not founded on injustice, but on the need of awakening industry to the value of its brands of oil, and upon the discovery of its founder that gasoline, previously thrown away, had a use.

The steel fortunes and the mining fortunes, stained as are some of their records, were not caused by cruelty, rapacity and exploitation. These evils were incidentals of growth, unnecessary and hampering. What the fortunes were founded on was the need of the people for steel, minerals and coal.

Just now the world needs everything. Every man's specialty, no matter what it is, is in greater demand than ever before in the world's life. With vision, industry, persistence, every man's specialty can be developed into something far more productive for the common good than ever before. It is every man's duty to increase production. And getting rich is a mere by-product of efficient community service.

Timely Comments and Gleanings of News from Here, There and Everywhere by a Former Editor of the Democrat

Among the most delightful spots in the world is Cascadia, matchless in its mountain charms, reasoned with some of the best and most sparkling sodawater found anywhere. It is worth the trip over roads beyond the worst someone somewhere ought to be ashamed of. For genuine rest and recuperation few places offer better advantages.

In the half-day there I met Judge C. E. Wolverton, former Albany lawyer, now the head on the bench of Oregon, a man noted not only for his legal attainments, but for a genial personality that endears him to many, and especially to his old friends of the 80s.

"The greatest game of baseball I was ever in," said the Judge, "was when the lawyers and real estate men met in Albany about 30 years ago." The writer helped lick the s. e. men.

Other celebrities at Cascadia were Judge John, Maj. Willis, President Ackerman, Dr. Poling, preacher and son gladder, Ed Hawker of Spanish War fame, now a game warden, and Ex-President French of the State Jewelers' association. Judge John was first at Cascadia just 50 years ago.

Thrilling games of quoits and croquet in the daytime, and community sings at night, keep the crowds in fever heat of excitement.

One's heart thumps at Brownsville at sight of the remains of the recent

On Legal Business—

Attorney G. W. Wright, one of Albany's active attorneys went to Salem this morning to transact legal business.

Returned from Lebanon—

Frank De Vaney a well known pioneer of the county who has been visiting relatives in Lebanon was an Albany visitor this morning on a trip to Salem.

Don't let your children suffer. If they are fretful, peevish, puny or cross, give them Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea—a harmless but safe laxative for children. 35c. Foshay & Mason, Albany, Oregon.

Constipation upsets the entire system—causing serious illnesses to the human family. Don't worry—Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will drive out constipation, regulate the bowels, tone the stomach, purify, cleanse. Without fail give it a thoro trial. 35c. Foshay & Mason Albany Oregon disastrous fire, a sorry sight; but the town will be a more substantial one when rebuilt with brick and cement.

Minor Jackson, once an Albany barber, has his sign up near a tree; A. A. Tussing, one of the most reliable lawyers in Oregon, is now in the Standard block, and others have secured temporary quarters.

It is very doubtful if there is a hotel in Oregon among the smaller places that is more popular than the Hotel Lebanon. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wilson make a point of serving their guests, the secret of hotel success.

There is always something new under the sun. I saw a man and woman carrying their best baby on earth around in a big square basket.

At Halsey I saw Ben Mayberry, formerly of Albany, loading stock for the Union Meat Co.

One winter in Albany a great many years ago, say 1884, a big barn belonging to Bill Cannon, at 2nd and Ferry, was so overjoyed with snow, it collapsed. Recently I met Mrs. Belle Cannon Tyler, a daughter of Bill, in Portland.

"Do you remember L. N. Liggett, a former employee of the Democrat, of Albany?" a woman asked me at the dinner at the Hotel Halsey. "Well, he was my brother," she said. She was on her way with her husband in an auto, from Raymond, Wash., to Brownsville.
