"AMERICANS—ALL"
 One of the most remarkable products of the American army training system is a detachment of 28 soldiers now touring the country in behalf of an Americanization campaign. Three months ago, it is said, not one of them could speak, read or write the English language. Neither were any of them familiar with the army manual. Now, in every city were they are giving exhibition drills that are said to suggest West Point graduates rather than recent recruits; and they are following these drills with public addresses explaining how they have acquired their military and lingual education.

 "Americans-All" they are called. It is a good name. They consist of fourteen nationalities—Spanish, Lithuanian, Italian, French-Canadian, Norwegian, Finnish, French, Polish, Russian, Armenian, Greek, Dutch, Jugoslav and Danish. Such an aggregation would have to learn English to enable the various individuals to understand each other, if for no other reason. The fact that they have made such remarkable progress in so short a time constitutes an inspiring object lesson to foreign-born residents everywhere.

What the army has done with them it can do with others. And what the army does, in the way of instruction in the language and ideals of the country, surely any city in America could do if it set about the matter seriously.

EXPLAINING TO EMPLOYEES
 A representative of the American Civic Reform Union tells a workman who thought he had a grievance against his employer when he found that the latter was charging the government 60 cents an hour for the work the employee himself was doing for 30 cents an hour. He went straight to the employer and accused him of grafting the other 30 cents.
 The employer did not fly into a rage and tell the workman it was none of his business. He calmly took the workman through the plant and explained to him in detail about the cost of the plant and its equipment, the fixed charges for interest, depreciation, taxes, accident and fire insurance, the cost of lighting and heating, etc., and the salaries of necessary office employees, all of which had to come out of that 60 cents an hour in addition to the workman's pay. The latter professed himself satisfied, and went contentedly back to his job.

"Making all due allowance for legitimate labor complaints," says this industrial expert, "we are likely to find that the chief cause of present industrial disturbance and discontent is the worker's ignorance of industrial economics. It is not the men's fault. They have never had a fair chance to understand how the system works."

"Give them a look-in. Explain the employer's side of it to them simply and frankly. They will not make so many impossible demands, and will be better judges of their own grievances."

THE BLESSED WEEVIL
 The town of Enterprise, Ala., is erecting a $3,000 monument to the boll weevil. This is not a joke. The money has already been voted.

The precise form of the monument is not revealed. Very likely it will consist of a rapacious weevil rampant on a cotton boll. Of the inscription there is no uncertainty. That monument will announce to the world that it is erected by the citizens of Enterprise, Coffee County, Ala. "In Profound Appreciation of the Boll Weevil and What It Has Done as the Herald of Prosperity."

No, those Enterprise citizens are not crazy. They are genuinely grateful for benefits conferred, that is all. And thereby hangs an instructive tale of agricultural evolution.

Coffee county used to raise about $1,500,000 worth of cotton a year. Then came the pernicious boll weevil, and cut that crop to shreds. Wherefore the Coffee county planters, making the best of a bad situation, turned to peanuts and livestock.

Their peanut crop this year is said to be worth $4,500,000. The county is full of corn, hogs, cattle and chickens, whereas it used to import most of its meat, grain, poultry and dairy products. The farmers who formerly borrowed money every year to finance their cotton crop now pay cash and have money in the bank and flippers in the barn. That is why they raise up and call the weevil blessed.

A commission from India is studying prison and corrective methods in this country. After several months of observation and study the commissioners say they are not so sure that Indian methods are now pretty good as they stand. Perhaps they feel as many Americans do, that prison reform is a simple matter, but reforming the prisoners presents a difficulty not yet solved in any country.

Get in all the coal you can, and then make warm clothes and exercise take the place of the coal you can't get.

Has anybody yet furnished a satisfactory definition of "profiteer?"

BLACK HAWK'S BONES TO REST IN MUSEUM

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct 5—A. P.—The bones of Chief Black Hawk who played havoc with settlers in Utah in the early 60's are now resting peacefully in the Desert Museum, in the Mormon Temple grounds in this city. The skeleton was brought from an Indian burial ground near Spring Lake Villa, Utah county this state, and with all the accoutrements of Indian burial, now reposes in a glass case in the Mormon church museum.

The curator of the museum has made every effort to prove to a certainty that the bones are those of the famous Indian chief, and the evidence he has gathered seems to prove their authenticity. These include affidavits of early settlers who witnessed the funeral procession of the chief.

Black Hawk is said to have died in 1870 as the result of a wound received in a fight with white settlers years previous. Prior to his death, it is said, he visited towns in the section he had harassed and made peace with all of his enemies.

HAD AVIATION TEA
 San Francisco, Oct 6—Seven socially prominent women of Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, were entertained recently at an "aviation tea" by Mrs. G. A. Buckingham mother of Cliff Durant, the aviator and automobile racer.

The guests were whisked aloft singly for flights of from 5 to 20 minutes in one of Durant's three airplanes, later discussing their experience over the tea cups.

Living Room Suites that are Different - Distinctive

America is becoming more and more a nation of better homes and better home furnishings. Perhaps the great war has emphasized the comforts of home. Certainly it has made home mean more to the boys who were in the service and their parents are anxious to have "home" mean more than ever to them. Quite naturally this has brought a big demand for home furnishings of the better sort and as we make it a practice to have what the people want, you will find our showing of living room furniture both different and distinctive.
