BERLIN DRAINED BY HEAVY BONUS

Support of Workless Persons
Hits Regular Residents
Hard

BERLIN. (By A. P.)—The "workless support" bonus that thousands upon thousands of men and women now receive in Berlin and Germany is proving a heavy drain on the treasury and it is charged that the bonus is so high that many men who in peace times were unskilled workmen now receive more pay for idleness than if they went back to their labor.

Begun under the stress of the revolution and with the intention of temporarily alleviating distress, complaint is made that this bonus system has become a deeply imbedded cancer that sucks millions from the government that can ill afford it.

The number of persons idle in Berlin during August was nearly a million. It is estimated that 750,000 of them do not want work because they are being supported by the state and are free to carry on the illegitimate pursuits of the unlicensed street dealer, the fly-by-night gambler, the soap and cigarette vendor.

The streets and squares of Berlin where people congregate most are, despite occasional attempts of the police, swarming hives of humanity, selling or buying poor soap, wretched matches, immoral postcards and indecent literature, and cigarettes that are sold at ridiculous prices, especially in the case of American cigarettes which now glut the market. Recently the police have begun to raid these vendors.

The first "razzia" as such raids are called was unexpected, and so many dealers were captured that they had to be sent to collection points and then were transferred from there to the various police stations. The confiscated food and goods required auto trucks for its transportation.

Roulette and little gambling games played on a tiny board that can be hastily concealed as the crowd scatters on the approach of the police, still attract more workless than other strata of the population—because the workless have time to kill, and money to spend and likewise the strong inclination to spend.

One of the most unpleasant features of Berlin street life is the array of wounded soldiers, suffering from broken or missing legs and arms, shell shock or alleged shell shock, who sit forlornly on the principal street and manipulate a violin or a harmonica. With hands and features that tremble these relics of the war beg from morning until long after midnight. Their "music" is always harrowing.

a criminal, dirty to the last degree, with a rough, unkempt beard, seems to have no difficulty with the police, as he hobbles up and down Unter den Linden, positively insulting passers-by, especially women. He fastens on them, often hold them by the arms, and demands, not begs, alms. Countless policemen pass up and down, but the man is always there.

The police no sooner put down one gambling club or street gambler than thus recently, in lieu of some cheap amusement table is widely used as a racetrack for six tiny automobiles.

The letter of a business man of Berlin telling of his experience when trying to get some repairs made on his house is commented on here as typical of the spirit of dislike of work that prevails in Germany since the revolution. He writes:

"I intended to have my house repaired and therefore sought a workman who before the war had done little things for me. I did not find at his house. Only his seven-year-old boy was there.

"Where is your father," I asked. "He is selling cigarettes on the Potsdamer Platz," the youngster replied.

"And your mother?" "She is selling soap at the Anhalter railroad station."

"Well is no one else here?"

"No, my big brother has gone to collect the workless support for father."

To Honor Unknown Dead

LONDON.—A national funeral service and the interment of the body of one unknown British soldier in the crypt of St Paul's cathedral has been suggested as a fitting tribute to the unknown dead who fell while serving with the British forces in the war. It is recalled that the French have erected a monument inscribed "To the Unknown Dead."
