REEL SPORT EXHILERATING

Angler Followers of Ike Walton are Rejuvenated by Fishing

THE ANGLER'S PLEDGE
I'll fill my lungs with the spring time air, my heart with the spring time song;
I'll shut my eyes to the world of care, and follow the stream along.
I'll go to school in the school outdoors and learn from a teacher wise
Who sits above on a boug and pours a song to the sunlit skies.
I'll taste again of the childhood joys, and I'll never be old or gray;
I'll keep my heart fifteen, my boys, no matter how long I stay.

—Douglas Mallock.

By George E. Case

There is much in store for the average man who takes advantage of the life outdoors and more to the man who fishes. In fishing, one achieves unthought of physical victories and the mind is freed from petty cares, and is held open for new impressions. The work a day life, he has been running away from, where he is planning outdoor trips begins to favor on looking back under a new point of view.

To persons of sedentary occupation, a fishing trip is ever productive of wonderfully new fields of enjoyment.

There is the invigorating climate with a "punch" in it to get the city man outdoors where he can gain the spirit of the wooded shores of cool breeze swept lakes, fast running stream and placid rivers, where he can fill up his lungs, stir up his brain and blood and build up his muscles.

Nature tells us we should mentally and physically relax in the open air in some form.

Men, in disobedience of this lay of nature, may achieve the high pinnacle which they seek in life, but how unsatisfying are the rewards thus achieved when at the sacrifice of health and the later hours of life are haunted by futile regrets.

Angling a Fine Recreation
Angling is fast becoming the universal recreation, alike to young and old, rich and poor.

In the whole stretch of sports there is none so conducive to a brighter outlook upon life.

Anglers become philosophers, who people the earth with kind faces and fill it with good and kind acts.

"Fishing maketh a man sufficient unto himself—for him the world is bounded by the cast of his line."

Angling aids longevity. That good old Isaac Walton lived to the advanced age of ninety years, was probably due in some degree to the fact that he loved to go fishing. Isaac McLeLan, the angler poet, died at the age of ninety-two. Dr. Jas. A. Henshall, the able apostle of the black bass, and who is referred to as the Isaac Walton of the American Anglers, is eighty-four and is still hale and hearty.

Get Away from the Grind
From the embryo angler, the small boy who delights in, and is content with sitting on the banks of creek or pond with cane pole, hook and line, with an old cork for a float and can of worms for bait, and fish for the lowly bullhead and sunfish, to the scientific angler with rod and reel and artificial flies, the spirit is the same all imbued with that wonderful greatness, God's Domain, the world outdoors, Nature.

There can be no doubt that certain men are endowed with a sort of inherent instinct, which leads to fishing indulgence as the alluring and satisfying of all recreations.

Then again, there is many a man or boy who needs but an introduction to this most alluring and fascinating of all outdoor sports to become an ardent and enthusiastic angler.

During the late spring and the summer months, thousands of toilers from every walk in life are leaving the turmoil of the city for a few weeks of rest, recreation and recuperation. And nowhere else is there a surer relief than a brawling trout stream or bass inhabited lake or river. May and June are generally considered as the best for trout fishing but in northern waters some very good catches are made in July.

BASKET MEN START SEASON

O. A. C. Hoop Artists Have 21 Games Booked; Women Take up Work

O. A. C. CORVALLIS, Jan. 9—
With the opening of the second quarter the varsity basketball men started actual work for their stiff season of 21 games. Although pre-season work was begun soon after the football season closed the work today has been more of conditioning the men and getting the coaches acquainted with the work of each individual and no emphasis has been placed on team work or preparing for games.

With the first game with Multnomah only a few days away the men from whom the team will be picked will go through two hours of hard workout each day. Although the men are now in good condition and have had sufficient work to locate the basket easily the basketball season is just beginning.

Intramural Work Begins
Intramural basketball will begin next Monday and competition between fraternities, clubs and independents is expected to be of a high pitch until the championships of the various leagues are decided. 35 teams will be in the various leagues and each team will play one game every week. The big cross-country run scheduled for last quarter will be run off Saturday, January 17, at 10 o'clock. The run was postponed because of the weather conditions at the end of the first quarter.

Women Take Up Hoop Work

Inter-collegiate basketball for women is expected to begin soon. The old varsity team will be reorganized and there will be several places to be filled. New courses are being offered this semester in playground administration and in plays and games. Miss Lois Rankin is a new instructor in this department who will have classes in swimming, sports and regular gymnasium work.

Monday Club Meets—
The members of the Monday Club met at the home of Dr. Lee last night and enjoyed the usual good time together. Attorney C. E. Sox made an interesting talk on Bolshevism.

Basket Ball Tonight—
The Silverton High School basketball team is to play the Albany High school team tonight at the Junior high school building. The game promises to be a hard fought battle and one worth the attention of the public. The admission for adults is 35 cents and for students 25 cents.
